AUSTRIA IS CRUSHED

Stripped of Power and Land Under Allied Peace Terms

Following are the outstanding features of the peace treaty handed to the Austrians today: Austria is left with a population of from 5,000,000 to 6,000,000 people, inhabiting territory of from 5,000 to 6,000 square miles.

All the Austrian naval and air forces must be demobilized at once. The Austrian republic must admit the right of the allies and associated powers to bring war offenders to trial. Austria must recognize the complete independence of Hungary, Czecho-Slovakia and the new Serb-Croat-Slovene state (Jugo-Slavia). Austria agrees to accept the League of Nations covenant and the peace conference labor charter. Austria is formally recognized as a new and independent state under the name of the Republic of Austria. The building or purchase of any submarine, even for commercial purposes, is forbidden. All war material must be surrendered.

Attendance—2,000.

Braves Field, June 2.—Al Demaree, who won his first start for the Braves last week, was sent back this afternoon in the opening tilt of the season's first double-header.

Starting off, Al looked fast as good as he did the other day, setting down the Dodgers in the first inning. Burleigh Grimes was his opponent on the mound.

The league has evidently decided to overlook the Brave uprising in New York yesterday, as Maranville and Herzog, two of the victims of Umpire O'Day's wrath, were in their regular places. Strangely enough, the said impire was working back of the bat.

THE GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Dodgers—Olson flied to Cruise. Magee was thrown out by Demaree. Griffith hoisted to Holke. NO RUNS.

Braves—Malone threw out Cruise. Olson knocked down Herzog's liner and threw him out. Powell grounded out, Magee to Koney. NO RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

Dodgers—Z. Wheat flied to Powell. Myers singled to centre. Koney doubled to right, Myers stopping at third. Malone died to Cruise, Myers scoring after the catch. M. Wheat doubled over third, scoring Koney. Grimes hit to Maranville and was thrown out, Holke making a great jumping catch and tag of a high throw. Grimes protested the decision so strongly that Umpire Quigley put him out of the game. NO RUNS.

Braves—Cadore went in to pitch for Brooklyn. Smith singled to left. Holke hit into a double play, Olson to Magee to Koney. Blackburne singled to centre. Blackburne was out stealing. M. Wheat to Magee. NO RUNS.

THIRD INNING.

Dodgers—Olson singled to centre. Magee sacrificed, Demaree to Holke. Demaree tossed out Griffith. Z. Wheat lifted to Cruise. NO RUNS.

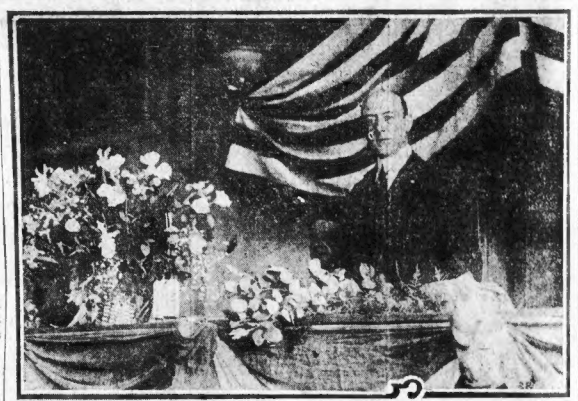
COL. LOGAN RESUMES PLACE ON BENCH



South Boston district courtroom was beautifully decorated with flowers today in honor of Colonel Logan, who resumed his duties as judge. This photograph shows Judge Logan standing at the bench, after enthusiastic greeting from his neighbors.

Thieves Steal Gems and Gun From Policeman

Thieves broke into the apartment of Patrolman Frank Andrews of Cambridge, at No. 168 Inman street, some time within the last two days, and made away with much jewelry. They also took the officer's loaded revolver. The entrance to the house was made through the front doors by picking the lock.

The officer and his wife had been spending a few days with friends and returned this morning to discover their loss.

A throng that packed the South Boston district court to the doors today welcomed back Judge Edward L. Logan, commander of the famous 101st Infantry during the war.

A burst of cheering which lasted five minutes greeted the judge when he entered on the arm of Judge William J. Day, who has occupied the bench in his absence. The two were accompanied by Mgr. George J. Patterson of St. Vincent's Church, South Boston, and former Lieutenant-Governor Edward P. Barry.

The address of welcome was made by Judge Day, who also referred to former Lieutenant William L. Drohan, now lying ill of a paralytic shock. Judge Day, furthermore, suggested that a monument be erected in honor of Michael J. Perkins, the South Boston hero who gave his life in France.

Mgr. Patterson praised Colonel Logan as a good soldier who looked after his men and who, by the same token, must be a good judge. Rev. Clarence R. Dunham of the Phillips Congregational Church, South Boston, also told of the appreciation of South Boston Protestants in the return of Judge Logan to the bench.

He was followed by Rev. Lucian H. Rollins, chaplain of the 101st Infantry during the days of strife. He said that Colonel Logan was absolutely fair to his men, looking after the Protestants as well as the Catholics.

Colonel Logan made a short speech, in which he said the demonstration received in the courtroom meant more to him than any previous reception.

Gamblers Are Fined Despite Lawyer's Novel Plea

That the sun, and not Congress, governs time, and that "the Lord's Day" really begins at 1 o'clock Sunday morning, new time, was the unusual claim made in Roxbury Court today. Herbert A. Kenney, counsel for seven men charged with gaming on the Lord's Day, pointed out that they were arrested at 12:30 Sunday morning, which was actually Saturday night.

The attorney held that "from time immemorial" the noon was reckoned by the sun — Astronomical, and that to change this legally it would be necessary to change the Constitution of the United States.

Judge Hayden held differently and the seven defendants, arraigned Sunday at the Tammany Club on Dudley street, Roxbury, were fined $5 each. They appealed.

COVENANT SCORED BY JOHNSON

By International News Service.

Washington, June 2.—"American fathers and American mothers want peace, and they want a league of nations which will give them peace—ask any mother in Kansas, or Illinois, or California, if she is for peace, she will say 'Yes' with all her heart," declared Senator Hiram W. Johnson, Progressive Republican of California, in the Senate this afternoon.

"But," he added, as he struck the keynote of this long-heralded attack—containing 15,000 words—upon the revised League of Nations covenant, "ask her if she is willing that her sons and her grandsons shall go to the Balkans, to China, to Korea, to Siberia, to Arabia, the Dalmatian coast, to compel peace—she will answer 'No.'"

Senator Johnson prefaced his address by once more calling up his resolution for the immediate submission of the complete official text of the peace treaty to the Senate by the State Department. The resolution has remained "unfinished business" on the Senate calendar, and, therefore a vehicle for frequent debate on the league covenant, since he recently introduced it.

"This league is written around the one central idea that the great democracies of the United States shall guarantee, maintain and preserve the present empires, boundaries, with its seething millions of discontented peoples; the increased territories of France, the vastly extended boundaries of Italy, throbbing with revolution, and the rape of China by Japan," Senator Johnson asserted.

"It not only wrenches the American nation from its traditional policy, deals with its economic resources, enmeshes it upon a precarious and perilous voyage, but commandeers, apparently for all time, its heart and its bone," he continued. "Neither the President has shown reasons for a single article or clause of the league covenant, nor has any one of the Americans presumably interested in the negotiations disclosed to the American people anything at all in respect to this document."

NORTH POLE, RED STAR LINER, DISABLED AT SEA

Queenstown, June 2.—The Red Star liner North Pole, bound for Antwerp, wireless ed early today that her engines were disabled about 100 miles off the Irish coast. Admiralty tugs put out to tow her into Queenstown.

Paris, June 2.—The conditions of peace of the allied and the associated powers, with the exception of military, reparations, financial, and certain boundary clauses, were handed to the Austrian plenipotentiaries at St. Germain today. Those clauses which are not yet ready for presentation will be delivered as soon as possible, the Austrians in the meantime having the opportunity to begin work on the greater part of the treaty in an effort to facilitate a final decision.

The Austrian treaty follows exactly the same outline as the German and in many places is identical with it except for the change in name. Certain specific clauses which applied only to Germany are of course omitted and certain new clauses included, especially as regards the new States created out of the former and linguistic minorities in Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Rumania and the Serbo-Croat-Slovpe State.

Austria is left by the treaty a State of from six million or seven million people, inhabiting a territory of between 5,000 and 6,000 square miles. She is required to recognize the complete independence of Hungary, Czecho-Slovak and the Serbo-Croat-Slovpe State, and to cede other territories which previously in union

AUSTRIANS TO ACCEPT TERMS

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN,
Correspondent of the International News Service.

Paris, June 2.—In his formal reply after receiving the terms of the treaty Austria is to sign, Dr. Reimer, the Austrian Premier, today admitted that Austria would have to accept any fate meted out by the Peace Conference.

But he trusted, he said, that "common sense would prevail so that German Austria would not be ruined economically, but could be assisted to resume her place among nations."

He asked for the privilege of self-determination for all peoples in the former territories of Austria, although two-fifths of that area is

By International News Service.

London, June 2.—Lieutenant-Commander A. C. Read, skipper of the American naval seaplane NC-4, who brought the first heavier-than-air machine across the Atlantic, declared today he was ready to set out on a return voyage to America if his superiors ordered it.

Lieutenant-Commander Read, Commander J. H. Towers of the NC-3 and Lieutenant-Commander P. L. N. Bellinger of the NC-1, who have summoned to Paris, may be decorated by President Wilson, it was officially reported today.

"Our flight absolutely demonstrated that any machine properly constructed and bearing trustworthy motors can make the trans-Atlantic voyage," said Lieutenant-Commander Read. "From now on it will be merely a matter of improving the safety services.

"I have given positively no thought to a flight back to America, but can do it if the American navy orders it. I am not aware of the exact nature of the conference desired with us by the President in Paris but suggest he may desire information regarding the best means of controlling international flying."

AUSTRIAN TERRITORY REDUCED TO LESS THAN 6,000 SQUARE MILES

MUST ACCEPT COVENANT OF LEAGUE OF NATIONS

with her composed the entire of Austria-Hungary with its population of over fifty million people.

Austria agrees to accept the League of Nations covenant and the labor charter, to renounce all her extra European rights, to demobilize her whole naval and aerial forces, to admit the right of trial by the allied and associated powers of her nationals guilty of violating the law and customs of force, and to accept detailed provisions similar to those of the German treaty as to economic relations and freedom of transit.

Of the summary, part one of the treaty, containing the covenant of the League of Nations, and part twelve, containing the labor convention, are omitted as being identical with corresponding sections of the German treaty. Part six, dealing with prisoners of war and graves, and part eleven, with aerial navigation, are also identical except for the substitution of names, and are likewise omitted.

Part thirteen of the German treaty, containing guarantees of execution, si not paralleled in the Austrian treaty.

The preamble is longer and more detailed than in the German summary and is as follows:

"Whereas, on the request of the former Imperial and Royal Austro-Hungarian government an armistice was granted to Austria-Hungary on November 3, 1918, by the principal allied and associated powers in order that a treaty of peace might be concluded; and

"Whereas, the allied and associated powers are equally desirous that the war, in which certain among them were successively involved, directly or indirectly against Austria, and which originated in the declaration of war against Serbia on July 28, 1914, by the former Imperial and Royal Austro-Hungarian government, and in the hostilities conducted by Germany in alliance with Austria-Hungary, should be replaced by a firm, just and durable peace, and

"Whereas the former Austrian-Hungary monarchy has now ceased to exist and has been replaced in Austria by a republican government, and

"Whereas, the principal allied and associated powers have already recognized that the Czecho-Slovak State, in which are incorporated certain portions of the said monarchy, is a free, independent and allied State, and,

"Whereas, the said powers have also recognized the union of certain portions of the said monarchy with the territory of the Kingdom of Serbia as a free, independent and allied State, under the name of Serb-Croat-Slovene State, and

"Whereas, it is necessary while restoring peace, to regulate the situation which has arisen from the dissolution of the said monarchy and the formation of the said States, and to establish the government of these countries on a firm foundation of justice and equity.

"For this purpose the high contracting parties, duly named, who, having communicated their full powers, found it good and due form, have agreed as follows:

"From the coming into force of the present treaty, the state of war will terminate.

"Austria is recognized as a new and independent State under the name of the Republic of Austria.

"From that moment, and subject to the provisions of this treaty, official relations will exist between the allied and associated powers and the Republic of Austria."

Sister Fights for the Estate of Jacques Lebaudy

By International News Service

Mineola, L. I., June 2—A contest over the estate of Jacques Lebaudy, so-called "King of the Sahara" and reputed millionaire, who was shot to by his wife, Margaret, at Phoenix Lodge, near Westbury, L. I., last February, was begun here today. The contest is made by Maria Theresa Jeanne Lebaudy Feis, who claims to be Lebaudy's sister, and who figures for the first time in our legal proceedings growing out of his death. Her address is given as Paris.

She alleges that Margaret Lebaudy was not the legal wife of Jacques Lebaudy and that she is a drug addict and therefore incompetent to administer the estate. The allegation is further made that thirteen-year-old Jacqueline Lebaudy, whom Lebaudy was alleged to have been trying to attack when his wife shot him, is not in fact Lebaudy's daughter.

FLEE FIRE OVER ROOF TOPS IN WEST END

Fifty persons fled over roofs to safety while more than a score of persons were carried down ladders when a fire which started in the basement of the five-story brick building at No. 73 and 75 Leverett street cut off escape by the stairways.

The fire had gained considerable headway when it was discovered. A still alarm was sent in and was quickly followed by two box alarms.

All the tenants in the house were awakened and attempted to leave the building by the stairways, but were driven back. Many then made their way over the roofs of nearby buildings.

With the arrival of the extra apparatus, ladders were placed at nearly every window and firemen assisted many persons down who had become confused by the dense smoke and feared to leave their apartments.

Several of those carried over the ladders were hysterical, although none was overcome. They were taken to the houses of neighbors where they were treated.

Considerable damage was caused in the wholesale furniture store of Samuel Cohen & Company, which occupies the first floor of the building. The fire did not reach the second floor.

The building was owned by Louis Levenson. Loss was estimated by the owner of the building at $14,000.

DAVIS IN PARIS TO SERVE ON RHINELAND BOARD

Paris, June 2—John W. Davis, United States ambassador to Great Britain, has arrived here for the purpose of serving on the Rhineland commission of the peace conference, now occupied by former enemies of the dual empire.

The present Austrian government never attempted any military resistance, Dr. Renner pointed out, showing that it is not militaristic.

The Austrian Premier promised careful consideration of the terms saying that the peace conference would always be kept acquainted with the exact conditions in Austria.

OPPOSES PAYING FULL COST.

Dr. Renner said since November 12 there had been no organization in Austria-Hungary, but the right of government formerly ruled by Carl had been vested in the people. The Austrian Premier opposed the suggestion that the new republic assume entire obligations of the ex-monarchy. He declared that all the governments formed from the territory of the old dual monarchy should liquidate their resources and assume the cost of the war pro-rata.

Premier Clemenceau opened the proceedings at 12:23 o'clock with a 15-minute speech, in which he declared that the Austrians would be allowed no oral concessions and that they must submit any protests in writing within a fortnight ("quinze jours" or fifteen days). The meeting lasted about one hour.

All the terms have not been completed (notably those dealing with reparations), M. Clemenceau said, but he assured the Austrians that the missing parts would be handed over at the earliest possible moment.

The atmosphere of surface cordiality was emphasized by Dr. Renner, Austrian premier, and chairman of the Austrian peace delegation, who, unlike Von Brockdorff-Rantzau, the German envoy, stood while he replied to M. Clemenceau's speech. Dr. Renner said that the monarchy in Austria-Hungary had collapsed with the departure of former Emperor Carl.

President Wilson's automobile broke down en route to St. Germain. It requisitioned another, but the accident delayed his arrival fifteen minutes and caused delay in the handing of the terms to the Austrians.

The spectacle was a most tragic one, with the nine nations in the world today reciting the terms to the representatives of the skeleton of the once powerful Austrian empire which they must accept if they expect their country to continue to live.

The proceedings, which will make the Hapsburg rule in Southern Europe hereafter simply a matter of history, were held in the ancient castle of St. Germain, where royal exiles during the days of the empire mourned the loss of the throne.

The curse called down upon the head of Emperor Francis Joseph had reached its climax. It was tragic that this, the last act in the drama of the former dual empire was represented, as the entente will not treat with the Hungarians until the soviet government at Budapest is stamped out.

Only the political, territorial and some of the military clauses are contained in the treaty. The experts have not yet agreed upon the financial measures.

IN ANCIENT THRONE ROOM.

The proceedings were staged in the main reception hall on the third floor of the castle, which was formerly used as the throne room. The hall has a high ceiling and the main scheme of the decorations is red and white. There are four chandeliers in the corners and a big open fireplace at the end of the hall.

Naturally the attendance here was smaller than at Versailles, because there were not so many countries warring on Austria as on Germany.

Green baize covered tables were lined up down the room. Premier Clemenceau had the most conspicuous seat. President Wilson sat upon the French Premier's right and Premier Lloyd George upon M. Clemenceau's left. Next to the President was Secretary of State Lansing, then Henry White and General Tasker H. Bliss. Next to Premier Lloyd George were A. J. Balfour, the British foreign secretary, and A. Bonar Law. The French colonial envoys sat next to the Americans and the British colonials near the delegates from London.

Next to the French were the Italians, who, with the Serbs, Jugo-Slavs and Poles, were probably the only delegations present actually holding any rancor.

STREETS ROPED OFF.

Arrangements for the seating were parallel with those at Versailles when the terms were handed to the Boches. The Austrians were placed at the extreme end of the room opposite Premier Clemenceau.

Outside, the streets had been roped off and were sternly guarded by French troops fully armed. No one was allowed to pass unless he had the proper credentials.

The adjacent streets were filled with curious townspeople watching with deep interest the passing of the envoys. Each motor car bearing a delegate carried a flag showing his nationality. The car bearing President Wilson did not bear the Stars and Stripes, but the President's personal flag with a gold eagle against a blue background. An orderly sat on the first seat of the big black limousine in which Mr. Wilson traveled.

The French delegates were the first to arrive, Stephen Pichon, the foreign minister, greeted the envoys as they entered the castle.

Shortly after noon the delegations, headed by M. Clemenceau and accompanied by President Wilson, entered the room and were escorted by a chief usher from the former office to their seats. This flunkey wore a huge gold linked chain, the badge of his office.

The seating arrangements had been made with punctilious regard for diplomatic usage. Delegates assigned to the seats closest to the Austrians came from the newest nations, such as Czecho-Slovakia and Poland. After a momentary wait the usher returned to the main threshhold with the announcement:

"Messieurs, les plenipoentiares Autrichiens."

In through the main door filed the delegation, headed by Dr. Renner, the Austrian premier, and the only delegate authorized to conclude the negotiations.

In remitting the proofs of the draft of the treaty to the Austrians, Premier Clemenceau warned the enemy delegates that no oral discussions would be permitted and that all protests must be handed in in writing within a fortnight.

AUSTRIANS GET TERMS FROM CLEMENCEAU

Dramatic Scenes at Meeting of Envoys Where Courtesies Are Exchanged

WOMEN IN BARNEY CASE TO BE TRIED WEDNESDAY

Attorney Thomas F. Murphy, accused of aiding his client, Herman L. Barney, alleged murderer of Policeman Charles E. Deininger, to escape from the Charles street jail, failed today to have his trial set for an earlier date than June 11.

At the same time that Murphy's motion for quick trial was denied, Judge Thomas H. Connelly in Brighton Court set Wednesday as the date of trial of Mrs. Mary E. Collins and Mrs. Lillian Ashenden, also accused of complicity in Barney's escape. This date was set in spite of the opposition of representatives of the police department, desiring more time to prepare their case.

WARNS POLICE TO BE READY.

Judge Connelly in setting the time for the trial of Mrs. Ashenden and Mrs. Collins declared the rights of the defendants were paramount to the convenience of witnesses and police officials, and intimated that if it were possible he would have also set the date of Attorney Murphy's trial ahead. He told Captain Matthew Dailey and Sergeant Maurice Sullivan, representing the police, that if the department had no lawyer to proceed Wednesday District Attorney Pelletier would doubtless provide legal aid.

"It is because District Attorney Pelletier wants these cases tried quickly as well as because of the rights of these two defendants that I make this ruling," declared the court.

Mrs. Collins was represented by Daniel Bradley, Mrs. Ashenden by Charles T. Kellough and Mr. Murphy by Francis Juggins. Most of the objections to delay came from Mr. Juggins and Mr. Kellough.

Mr. Juggins' contention was that Mr. Murphy if not tried until June 11 would have little time to devote to preparing his case for Barney, who goes on trial on June 18, charged with the murder of Patrolman Charles Deininger. He declared that he had tried to find Captain Dailey Saturday night to arrange for trial today, but failed.

AUTOIST FINED $75 ON CHARGE OF INTOXICATION

James F. Dooley, 18, of Kempton street, Roxbury, was fined $75 in Newton Court today for driving an auto while under the influence of liquor. He appealed. He was arrested Saturday night when his machine crashed into the rear end of a car owned and operated by Thornton N. Gill of Waltham.

GIVEN TWO MONTHS FOR DISTURBANCE ON CAR

William J. Vahey, Langley road, Newton, was in Newton Court today and sentenced to two months in the House of Correction for causing a disturbance on a Boston and Worcester electric car Saturday night. He appealed.

GERMANY WILL NOT SIGN, SAYS ERZBERGER

Armistice Commission Chairman Appeals to America for Modification of Terms

Berlin, June 1, via London, June 2.—"It was America's military intervention that brought victory to the entente."

This declaration was made to the International News Service today by Dr. Mathias Ersberger, chairman of the German armistice commission.

"The German revolution was essentially the result of the proclamation of President Wilson's Fourteen Points, which convinced the German people that they only had to smash the old military system to secure democracy in their own country, and prove honest their efforts for friendship with the whole world," continued Dr. Ersberger.

"America ought now to intervene and bring about a diplomatic turn for a decided change in the peace negotiations. It is her duty, having laid the foundations of the negotiations upon President Wilson's program. Considering these facts Germany has a strong claim to mass known her position without any ambiguity before President Wilson and the American people."

Dr. Ersberger again referred to the fourteen principles, saying:

"German democracy demands from America primarily a clear answer to the question: In the Versailles document an authenticated interpretation of President Wilson's fourteen points? America can only answer no. Secondly, German democracy demands to know whether America entered the fight for a peace of right and conciliation or whether she fought only for a military victory. In this respect the interests of France and Belgium ought to receive America's especial attention, since they played the decisive part in the war by drawing America into it.

"The depriving of Germany of the unhampered use of her working productive strength necessary to enable her to reconstruct France and Belgium is the only reason why Germany rejects the peace and neither promises nor threats will move the German people to sign.

"In time America must know that the treaty is only a scrap of paper, because it could not be fulfilled.

"If America tolerates such dishonest politics in her name, cloaked by the fourteen principles, Germany must momentarily accept, but German democracy should then confess it a policy of imperialistic outrage against a peace made defenceless by deceit.

"Democratic Germany directs its final appeal to democratic America, and it would be a tragic error if America believes that German declarations against the Versailles terms are only diplomatic maneuvres.

"Therefore, I must repeat in the fullest way that Germany will not sign these terms because she cannot without striking herself out from the family of living nations."

RHINELAND'S ACTION STIRS BERLIN

German Government Alarmed by Spread of Separatist Movement

Exclusive Cable to the International News Service from the London Daily Express.

Berlin, June 2.—The German government is greatly alarmed over the Rhineland separatist movement which culminated in the proclamation of a Rhine republic on Sunday, with the capital at Wiesbaden.

The secessionist movement among the German border states has become general. The latest communities to set up independent governments include Bavaria, East Prussia, West Prussia and Hanover, as well as the Rhineland.

The separatist activities in Hanover have caused especial anxiety to the government, as the royalists there recently celebrated the ex-king's birthday. The mayor of the city of Hanover blames the British for the Spartacist movement.

Baron von Wangenheim, a prominine royalist, is supporting the Duke of Cumberland or his son "for the next king." He is also urging self-government after the British system.

The German government has appealed to the residents of Eastern Germany to support the counter peace proposals and to preserve order, so as not to give the allies any cause for marching further into the country.

$10,000 VERDICT IN CAMBRIDGE AUTO SUIT

A verdict of $10,000 was returned by the jury in the Superior Civil Court of Cambridge today in favor of Mrs. Helen McDaniels of Cambridge, administratrix for the estate of Katharine McDaniels, her daughter, also of Cambridge. Mrs. McDaniels won her suit against Horace E. Cummings of Winchester. Cummings, while driving his automobile on Massachusetts avenue near Shepard street on October 20, 1917, struck and knocked down Katharine McDaniels. She died on January 20, 1918.

Matthew O. Najarian, who conducts a store at No. 219 Bunker Hill street, Charlestown, was fined $100 this morning in the Charlestown district court on a charge of illegal sale of alcohol. An additional fine of $50 was imposed upon him for not placing a poison label on a bottle. He appealed and was held for the higher court on $500. Najarian was arrested on May 23 by Sergeant George Dickerson, who purchased a bottle of denatured alcohol from his store.

Japanese Baron Calmly Awaits Outcome of Divorce Suit

New York, June 2.—A royal Nippon ancestry, traceable for two thousand years back, may or may not have influenced Gertrude Boyle, sculptress, to give her love to Baron Takeshi Kanno of the ruling family of the Samurai, who left Japan for America in 1904 to lecture here on the art and literature of the Flowery Kingdom.

But it was not sufficient to hold her love, and Baron Kanno is awaiting the outcome of a divorce action noted in the Supreme Court as "Kanno vs. Kanno," in which he names Yeitaro Ishigaki.

Here is the Baron's story:

MARRIAGE WAS HAPPY.

"I arrive in America from my sweet home in Japan on July 22, 1904. I do not know San Francisco, but I know Joaquin Miller, the 'Poet of the Sierras,' lives there. I read all his poetry.

"I find Mr. Miller and say I want to know him. He say, 'You stay here and live with me.' So I live with Mr. Miller nine years.

"Mr. Miller want bust made of his mother, so he call Gertrude to make bust. She stay there two years. I am lonesome for my Japan. Gertrude very pretty girl. I love her and ask her to marry me.

"We marry and live very happy in cottage in Mr. Miller's home on the Heights in Oakland in California.

"Then a jiu-jitsu man come along and fall in love with Gertrude. When he cannot have her he start to Japan, and whole household think, 'Oh, it was very horrible, and I get much worried.

"I have protege, Yeitaro Ishigaki. 'One day Ishigaki, who is twenty-one, he come to me. He look half insane. His face black. He tell me he love my wife, Gertrude, and must have her. He say he commit suicide if I not give her up. I remember jiu jitsu man who commit hari-kari because he love my wife and am worried. I say to myself, 'It is your duty to prevent him killing himself.' Then I say to him, 'You may love her, but if you take her you break a great moral.'

"Soon the newspapers hear about it and print stories, saying mean things about Ishigaki.

"They call him 'home-wrecker.' My wife read stories and is sympathetic for Ishigaki and love him.

"I say to myself, 'You must leave them alone if they love each other. You must let your love interfere or he may kill himself. It is your moral duty to go away.'

COMES TO NEW YORK.

"So I come to New York to write about Japanese art and literature. I stay here three years. Then I learn that they come here also and have studio on Fourteenth street. Then I tell myself that I must let public know that Gertrude no longer love me; that she love Ishigaki. My lawyer asks court for divorce. Justice Greenbaum asks for more questions. Then I marry her, where I marry her, and did I love her. Gertrude she say 'Love is life.' And I say nothing. I want to be free. I am going to stick to the man I love.'

"I do not know what I get my divorce. Maybe three days. Maybe more. If Gertrude loves Ishigaki, she stay with him. But people must know that they have broken great moral law. It is right that people know. It is too bad, because Gertrude is forty-six and Ishigaki is twenty-six. Maybe when she is fifty —he not love her any more."

Baron Kanno and the sculptress were married in 1906 in San Francisco. He said he met her while he was living with Joachim Miller, the "Poet of the Sierras."

MOTHER CHURCH CROWDED WITH DELEGATES

The annual meeting of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, was begun at 2 o'clock today in the "Mother Church" at Falmouth and St. Paul streets, Back Bay, with a record attendance on account of court proceedings now pending which have vital bearing upon the control of the church organization.

Tickets for 5000, the seating capacity of the church, were issued. Members were on hand from all parts of the country. Many members, women especially, were at the church as early as 11 o'clock, although the doors were not opened until 1 and the absorbing was the interest in the 1919 meeting as to the legal issues soon to come up for discussion.

No one was admitted except bonafide members and those only by ticket.

One of the court actions is the bill in equity filed by the trustees of the Christian Science Publishing Society in the Supreme Judicial Court asking that the directors of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, be restrained from continuing attempts to secure control of the publishing society or, failing in that, from taking part in its vital publishing concerns.

The bill of complaint that the church directors were given no authority over the publications of Mrs. Eddy and that it was the intention of Mrs. Eddy that they (the defendant) should not participate in the work of the Christian Science Publishing Society.

Another matter which was expected to be brought up was the attempt of John V. Dittemore, former director of the church, to secure his position back. He was dismissed as a director last March. The directors have alleged that his removal was due to violations of the by-laws in the church manual.

PAGES' PAY BILL VETOED BY GOVERNOR

Says It's a Boy's Job and Doesn't Need a Man's Salary; Other Raises Turned Down

Governor Coolidge today vetoed the bill to increase the pay of State House pages to $1,040, from $510. There are about twenty of them in House and Senate.

"It's not a man's work, but a boy's job—and you can't take it away from them, was the substance of the Governor's veto message. The salary is enough for the work, he said, "the requirements can be filled by young gentlemen just out of their teens," and to boost the salary would open the jobs to the full-grown.

The blue-uniformed boys can get their consolation from this—the closing paragraph of the veto message:

"But there is another and deeper reason for rejecting this appropriation. The position of page should be filled by a boy. For time immemorial it has been the prerogative of the boys of this Commonwealth to serve as pages to the General Court. There boys are entitled to have these places saved and cherished for them. To place any adult—as is proposed—will result in casting aside the boys and giving these places to mature men.

"The opportunity which has meant so much to the boys of Massachusetts must not be lost from them by turning their ancient occupation into a man's job. The youthful page must vanish from the State House once his place is made attractive to the bolted adult. It is no time to lay violent hands on the ancient heritage of youth."

Governor Coolidge also vetoed the bill to increase the salary of Chief Engineer Fred H. Kimball of the State House from $2,600 to $2,900. In that veto he said that "it is not probable that positions which a salary of $2,400 are in need of being increased at the present time. There is no difficulty in finding a competent man at the present salary for the service desired."

He also vetoed the bill to provide that appointments and promotions in the police force shall be made by competitive civil service examination only from the class next below that in the vacant position. The bill was supported by the Massachusetts Police Association. Governor Coolidge said in his veto message that "no rule of seniority should be allowed to supersede the present democratic rule of efficiency."

COL. ASTOR'S DIVORCED WIFE WEDS BARON

Mrs. Ava Willing Astor, first wife of the late John Jacob Astor, who was secretly married in London to Lord Ribblesdale, sixty-five years old and a noted sportsman.

The ceremony took place at the registrar's office here Thursday through the banns have been complied with their desire, and have furnished the information, but with respect to such customers as have not indicated that desire, we shall decline to give it, for the reason, so far as we may lawfully do so."

"These bills are perfectly useless without the names," said Attorney Palais.

Commissioner Schaff, hearing out this statement, said: "The labor of going over the bills and addresses and traveling over the same ground again and again would require years for any person to do it. That kind of is merely embarrassment, and the effect of it is to clog the way, and hamper the efficient discharge of the duties we have to perform.

"I think it is about time that we cleared up some of the frustrating obstacles in this case."

COMMISSIONER SURPRISED.

Mr. Ives objected that he understood the bills were to be introduced without names and in this was borne out by Commissioner Solomon Lewenberg.

"I think the strictures of Commissioner Schaff are groundless," added the lawyer, to which General Schaff replied: "I have no fault to find with you. You represent a corporation and it is your duty to make the case appear as favorable as possible. But I am surprised at the attitude you have taken today.

"It is absolutely certain in my mind that the city made a grievous blunder in not getting samples of what is occurring among your customers in a limited area."

Commissioner Lewenberg suggested that the matter be laid over until examination was shown the names be made. This was illustrated by picking up two bills, rendered under the new schedule, in which the charge in one case was twice what it was in the other.

DEGREES FOR YALE MEN WHO DIED IN THE WAR

New Haven, Conn., June 2.—Yale is to honor the memory of the 200 college men who gave their lives in the world war, during commencement week. The afternoon of Sunday, June 15 will be devoted to exercises in memory of the dead.

MANY ENGAGEMENTS RUMORED.

Not a season has passed that the first Mrs. Astor's name has not been linked with that of some prominent man. She has been successively reported engaged to Lord Curzon, young Lord Dunraven, the Earl of Rosslyn, Maurice Rostand, son of the late French poet, a youth the age of Mrs. Astor's son, Vincent, Burdett Coutts, Count Pestetics, son of the Austrian diplomat; the Grand Duke Mecklenburg-Strelitz, and others.

She denied all these rumors, and has been quoted as saying that she should never marry again.

Mrs. Astor has spent most of her time in recent years in England.

Following Colonel Astor's death she came to this country with her daughter, and it was reported that she would dispute with the young widow the social leadership of New York formerly enjoyed by the mother of John Jacob Astor. She retained for a long time the name "Mrs. John Jacob Astor" after her divorce, but later called herself "Mrs. John Astor" to avoid confusion, and after Colonel Astor's death used the name "Mrs. Ava Astor."

VERY PROMINENT SOCIALLY.

She has enjoyed great social prominence in England, although less so since the accession of Queen Alexandra. The former has shown an unfriendly attitude toward Americans which has been the subject of frequent comment, and is reported to have snubbing Mrs. Astor publicly.

Details of the divorce proceedings which separated Colonel and Mrs. Astor nine years ago were never made public, but it was known that the decree was granted in three minutes, and that while Mrs. Astor was permitted to remarry the defendant was forbidden to remarry during her lifetime without express permission by the court. At the time of his second marriage he had great difficulty in finding a clergyman to perform the ceremony.

Rumors were persistent at one time that he and his first wife were to remarry.

WEALTHY IN OWN RIGHT.

Mrs. Astor is wealthy in her own right. For a short time following her divorce she was socially under a slight cloud in English society, but gradually regained her former position. She is a born social leader and noted for her smart style of dress. She aroused criticism at times for independence of action, as for example in giving dinners to men alone. At one time she attended a fancy dress ball costumed as June, leading a live peacock.

Her daughter Muriel has always made her home with her mother.

Lord (Baron) Ribblesdale was born at Fontainebleu in 1854. He was married to Charlotte Monsten in 1877 and became a widower in 1912. He was a major of the rifle brigade, but retired in 1886. He is a great sportsman, is master of the Queen's hounds, and owns about 6,000 acres.

COMPANY CLOGS ELECTRIC RATE HEARING

Mass of 13,000 Bills, Without Names, Stirs Rebuke by Commissioner

Investigation of grave charges of discrimination brought by the people of Lynn against the Edison Electric Illuminating Company was temporarily blocked today by the failure of the company's counsel to produce the names of subscribers on a single customers' list before the Massachusetts Gas and Electric Light Commission.

A mass of 13,000 anonymous bills was put into the case by F. Manley Ives for the company when the hearing was resumed in the morning before Chairman Frederick P. Fish. Attorney Palais for the complainants, an "utterly useless an obstacle, and a hindrance to the investigation."

Mr. Palais' view was shared by Commissioner Schaff, who said the great mass of unidentified statistics "the most colossal argument against investigation that was ever heard."

Commissioner Schaff pointed out that even if evidence of discrimination was produced by the mountain of bills it would require more time to identify those benefiting by such favoritism than the duration of the company.

Attorney Palais for the people, Attorney Ives for the company, and members of the commission argued concerning the validity of the mass of bills as submitted. They cover the period from the middle of April to the middle of May, according to Mr. Ives.

USELESS WITHOUT NAMES.

It was Mr. Ives who when the charge was first introduced said: "The company feels that it is none of the business of Mr. Grenville S. MacFarland or of the Boston Ameri. can to pry into customers' use for their service, and is to plainly our duty to observe the wishes of our customers.

"So far as we have indicated a desire for publicity in the matter by signing this petition (the petition circulated through the Lynn Item) we have complied with their desire, and have furnished the information, but with respect to such customers as have not indicated that desire, we shall decline to give it, for the reason, so far as we may lawfully do so."

"These bills are perfectly useless without the names," said Attorney Palais.

Commissioner Schaff, hearing out this statement, said: "The labor of going over the bills and addresses and traveling over the same ground again and again would require years for any person to do it. That kind of is merely embarrassment, and the effect of it is to clog the way, and hamper the efficient discharge of the duties we have to perform.

"I think it is about time that we cleared up some of the frustrating obstacles in this case."

COMMISSIONER SURPRISED.

Mr. Ives objected that he understood the bills were to be introduced without names and in this was borne out by Commissioner Solomon Lewenberg.

"I think the strictures of Commissioner Schaff are groundless," added the lawyer, to which General Schaff replied: "I have no fault to find with you. Wife Criticizes Her Husband as Cook; Gets Decree

San Francisco, June 2.—Many a husband has been dumped unceremoniously out of matrimony by a bride who pounded tactless comments about cooking, but it remained for Superior Judge Graham's calendar to produce the first case of a husband losing out because he too severely examined his bride's conception of pie, bouillon.

Mrs. Flora Hoare was the complainant. Asked to tell why she felt she is a professional cook and decided not to be a housewife, she said that she was in constant demand as a dinner. The Imperial Arms Hotel, Tenderloin and Hoare house. Mrs. Hoare said she objected to cooking as long as she could, while Hoare was employed.

BOATING PARTY MISSING AT WINTHROP

A party of Winthrop men and women who put out from the Pleasant Park Yacht Club yesterday in a motor boat had not been reported in the police department this morning.

Relatives of the yacht club fear the boat was carried out to sea as a result of engine trouble.

The names of the missing people were not learned by the police, but State Officer Hennessey of Winthrop said on once started out to make a search of the islands in the harbor.

So far as could be learned the missing members of the yacht club numbered several Winthrop men and women. They are said to be in the habit of meeting at the club quarters early Sunday morning carrying lunches, and prepared to spend a day on the water. It is understood that a cruise about the harbor, with luncheon on one of the islands, was planned.

The party got away in good shape, and the weather reporters predict a strong north-northeast wind was blowing part of the day, which later shifted to the east. It is feared that the engine in the motorboat broke down, and that the small craft was carried out to sea. This is the only explanation that members of the yacht club can offer for the failure of the party to return.

TOWNE'S BRIDE WINS HIS MA'S FORGIVENESS

Millionaire's Son Who Wed Pretty Jewish Girl Is Injured in Factory Work

Stamford, Ct., June 2.—Having sacrificed wealth, social advantages and parental approval to marry a pretty Jewish girl, nineteen-year-old Joseph Meredith Towne today finds himself reunited to his family through the medium of a broken arm, received while working at one of the prettiest romance-to-marriage comedy-dramas in this State is nearing the "all is forgiven" stage.

Beautiful Helen, the eighteen-year-old factory girl for whose love the wealthy youth defied his legal guardians, today sits at his bedside always with her mother-in-law, Mrs. Rosa Towne, who has consented to accept parental forgiveness and leave the cabaret booth, to return to his studies.

Young Towne is said by his friends to be a "chip of the old block," and to have inherited the strong will, or stubbornness, of his father, Joseph Towne, Stamford millionaire. He fell in love with Helen and eloped when his parents refused their consent to the match, and now wants to support his wife and baby and live independent of his people.

Towne went to Detroit with his wife and baby, Helen, and his aunt, and came near being killed in a factory accident. One finger was cut off, and his left arm fractured in the pulley which he is now recovering.

READY FOR COLLEGE.

Towne, when he eloped with the fairest girl he was ready for college. His mother, humbled by the events of the last few years, is now not only willing but eager that he return to his father's home, and pursue his studies, while his girl wife is "polished" at some finishing school and prepared for the social life she will lead in the Towne household. In this wish she has found an unexpected ally in the person of her father-in-law, for Sarah was forced into the factory by the unexpected arrival of a child, notwithstanding a strong desire for study, and wants her husband to have the chance.

HER PARENTS ANGRY.

And with the reconciliation between young Towne and his parents accomplished, there looms up for the youthful pair a job more important and more difficult than either mama and papa were not flattered when their pretty daughter eloped with the wealthy young scion of the house of Towne, and the fact that the opposition was just as determined for religious reasons and others, and those who had been friends of the bride's opponents when the two mothers-in-law met.

For if Mrs. Frederick T. Towne, society matron, is haughty, Mrs. Raven, the bride's mother, is proud of her son-in-law's pedigree, and nothing will ever convince her that her Sarah did not make a good match.

But various soothing letters from her little girl have arrived at the home of Mrs. Towne, and softened her hostility, so that one great big family reunion with the Raven and the Townes is in prospect, and the indications are that they will all live happily ever after.

MILLION-DOLLAR FUND READY TO BACK HOME BUILDING CAMPAIGN

BANK HAS PLAN TO AID BOOM

Vice-President of Fidelity Trust Company Outlines Scheme to Assist Prospective Builder

A BUILD NOW plan to assist the prospective home builder to realize what he has in mind has been outlined by Archibald L. Stark, vice-president of the Fidelity Trust Company, No. 148 State street.

"Build Now," says Mr. Stark. "There is no reason why people shouldn't build now."

The vice-president says his bank has as much as $1,000,000 to loan to prospective home builders.

"If you are ready to build a home NOW this bank will assist you," Mr. Stark said.

"I believe that the right step at this time and the best step for the man who wants to own his own home is to BUILD NOW," he said. "If he continues to wait until prices lower he will only lose precious time. If he waits he will regret it. He will find himself out in the cold when the big building boom, which is inevitably heading our way, strikes us."

Mr. Stark praised the American for its BUILD NOW campaign and said that building now would help everybody interested in the building and business as a whole.

FINANCES NEW GARAGE.

Vice-President Stark's company is financing the new model garage on Eliot street, which is one of the largest building operations undertaken in Boston in a considerable period. The company is also financing a large building operation on a prominent corner on State street, while money has been loaned to numerous small builders, including builders of homes.

For a considerable period the company has been lending money on mortgages to depositors, and the volume of these transactions is gradually on the increase.

"We believe in encouraging the home builder," Mr. Stark said. "We are convinced that 'BUILD NOW' is good, common sense advice. The man who builds now with the object of increasing the comforts of his family and himself is not going to be particular in his demand for investment returns, unless these returns be family contentment and happiness for which people are willing to pay.

"To my mind we are not going to see prices go lower. Prices will not go lower on building materials of any kind. Rents, which all records show have not risen in comparison to the rise in general conditions, certainly will not show any decrease, you may be sure of that. The costs of the most essential materials indicate a future upward trend.

"And the labor market, in my opinion, will never be lower than it is today. Yet the labor market is as 'short' today as during the period of the war. Labor is not over-plentiful.

"To those of my friends who have asked me what I thought of the American's BUILD NOW campaign, I have said that I agree with the various opinions expressed in the American and reasons given why we should BUILD NOW.

PRICES TO STAY UP.

"I am convinced that if a man wants to build he should build now. He should not put off till tomorrow what he can do today, especially when we consider that prices are not likely to come down substantially in a considerable period—some people say five years—so that the amount of profit saved in waiting to the end of that period could not possibly balance the time lost in waiting.

"The situation presents itself to the prospective home builder very much as it does to the productive industrial builder. If the manufacturer has a desire to build he should build now. The returns from his investment will net him such a profit in the near future that would more than offset any possible depreciation in his building or in the reduced cost of building materials.

"When the resumption of business on a large scale recurs, which it will soon do, many people who are being urged to BUILD NOW and who are not taking the advice will find themselves in the lurch. We are about to embark on a great export trade and we must have the industrial buildings ready to take care of the great increased business that will be the natural outcome of the war's aftermath.

"When this business boom occurs factory buildings must be prepared to meet it. The West and Middle West are booming with business. The Middle West especially is building her nest. I recently attended a conference in the Middle West of the directors of one of the largest manufacturing plants in the United States and the opinion was generally expressed that there will be no end of new and liberal business for those who can handle it."

SAYS ONLY BULLETS CAN DESTROY IRISH REPUBLIC

St. Louis, June 2.—"The Irish Republic has been established by Irish ballots. It can only be destroyed by English bullets," declared Katherine Hughes, the Canadian ... "er, before a convention of the International Catholic Women's Alliance.

"Today the Irish of Ireland, where 85 per cent. of the people, Catholic and Protestant, stand united now, as under Wolfe Tone, and denying any outside political intrigue ever to dig religious gulfs between them again, have selected their own form of government," she added.

MOST OF ARMY HOME IN JULY, SAYS BAKER

Only 200,000 Men to Serve Indefinate Period With Occupation Troops

By International News Service.

Washington, June 2.—"France will be practically clear of American soldiers by July 1," Secretary Baker told the House Naval Affairs Committee today. Except for between 150,000 and 200,000 men in the army of occupation, the American expeditionary force will have been returned to the United States at the end of July, the secretary declared.

"Just how long the army of occupation will remain in Europe we cannot tell, because it depends upon the contingencies of the peace treaty," Secretary Baker declared. "I should say that the period it will remain is very indefinite."

Secretary Baker was called before the committee to state when the services of the navy in transporting troops home could be dispensed with and there might be demobilization of naval forces.

"HELP SERBIA" DRIVE IS ON TODAY

American Women's Hospitals Out to Raise $250,000 to Fight Disease

The drive of the American Women's Hospitals to raise $250,000 to provide trained medical forces in Serbia and other war-stricken countries of the Near East started today.

Contributions are solicited to swell the fund which will make possible the sending of two movable hospitals to Serbia to check the ravages of disease which is fast decimating the population. Volunteer women physicians are in readiness to offer themselves for this necessary work as soon as the funds to carry it on are secured.

The drive is in response to an urgent appeal for assistance from the Serbian government. The call for help has been heard by the American Women's Hospitals, and the campaign for funds is the answer.

The hospitals for which the funds are asked will move about through the devastated area, remaining in each district just long enough to get the plague under control.

"The Battalion of Life," as the women physicians who took part in the great war were called, worked in co-operation with the Red Cross during the struggle and were commended by Surgeon-General Blue. Six of the one hundred were decorated by the French government.

Contributions to the hospital fund may be sent to the American Women's Hospitals, care of the Old Colony Trust Company, Bay State Branch, Boston. The Massachusetts headquarters are at No. 24 Newbury street.

Sunday Baseball at Harvard?--Well, Nearly So

Of course they weren't playing really, truly baseball at Harvard yesterday, because it was Sunday, and Sunday baseball has been frowned on by the great and general court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts—God save it.

But Harvard batters, some of whose eyes are said to be a bit off color, had Sabbath batting practice, nevertheless.

Ted Lewis, former Boston National pitcher, but now dean of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, served up a few warm ones to the batters. Lewis had to coach the Harvard batsmen on Sunday, his "day off," or not at all.

HUGE SEA SENDS TWO SOLDIERS TO DEATH

Deck of Transport Swept by Giant Wave on Way Home

New York, June 2.—Two soldiers returning with the 142nd Infantry, 36th Division, aboard the transport Pueblo, lost their lives when a huge sea broke over the deck, sweeping both men overboard.

The victims were Corporal Henry S. Hovey of Company E, who lived at Grand Prairie, Tex., and Private Joseph C. Stone of Company H, Clarendon, Tex. A boat was launched and the crew succeeded in rescuing Hovey, but he died later in the ship's hospital.

The Pueblo brought fifty officers and 1,794 men, mostly from Oklahoma and Texas.

On the steamship Rotterdam, which berthed earlier in the day, came 2,057 men of the A. E. F., including the 178th Infantry brigade headquarters staff, the 30th mounted supply train, and the 305th sanitary train of the 80th Division.

The Pueblo ran into rough weather 150 miles out from France, bucking tremendous seas. There were sixty men under the lee of a boat on the forward part of the vessel when the steamship buried her nose in a sea, which broke directly over her bows and sent tons of water hammering on her deck and racing aft like a deluge, sweeping two men overboard.

DEAFNESS

We have always impressed upon the minds of those afflicted with Deafness, Head Noises, Discharging Ears and all Catarrhal diseases of the nose, throat and chest, that in the summer season, when nature is in its mildest mood and assists the physician, these diseases are relieved in about one-half the time required at any other season of the year. We again advise those suffering from these serious troubles to begin treatment now.

All patients suffering from Deafness, Head Noises, Discharging Ears or any catarrhal disease of the nose, throat or chest who apply at the office of the Osmo-Chemic Physicians before June 8th, will receive consultation, careful physical examination and a trial treatment without a penny to pay for either consultation, examination or trial treatment.

Miss Helen O'Laughlin, 614 4th St., So. Boston, says: "I had been deaf for 4 years. So deaf that I could not hear over the telephone. I had noises in my head that made me dizzy. I read of the wonderful results of the Osmo-Chemic treatment for deafness and was treated with it. Now the noises are gone and I hear again."

FILENE SEES POLITICS IN RIDER

Declares Farmer Vote Sought by Proposed Repeal of Daylight Saving

Declaring that the proposed repeal of the daylight saving law, attached as a rider to the agricultural appropriation bill now before Congress, is "primarily a political move on the part of certain interests desirous of securing the farmer vote," A. Lincoln Filene today urged all who believe in retaining the present law to redoubled effort.

The House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce today held a hearing in Washington at which both proponents and opponents of the bill were heard. Every New England representative in Congress is declared to be opposed to the repeal of daylight saving, following a poll by the daylight saving committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

A. F. OF L. FAVORS LAW.

In addition, the American Federation of Labor is squarely lined up in favor of retaining the present law, according to Mr. Filene, who is chairman of the Daylight Saving Committee of the Boston Chamber.

"Not a single business house in New England is against the measure, so far as I have been able to learn," said Mr. Filene. "On the contrary, practically all of the industrial and mercantile leaders of the country are heartily in favor of daylight saving, and are exerting their every effort to prevent the repeal by the farmers and the farmer politicians of the West."

Discussing the measure now before Congress, A. Lincoln Filene said:

"The population of the United States is two to one in favor of the present law, which has been found to be both beneficent and wise by nearly every civilized country on the face of the earth.

"Statistics show that there are two of the population of the United States engaged in other than agricultural pursuits for every one employed in farming. That being so, the measure should be retained as a simple proposition of democracy. Only the farmers are opposed to it, and they are by no means unanimous in their opposition. Throughout New England the opposition from the agricultural population has been faint and far between.

"Of all the nations which have adopted daylight saving, Germany is the only nation which has seen fit to dispense with it. It seems to me that this fact should be sufficient reason for our continuing it—if other reasons are necessary.

"What the people want should be the guiding principle in determining whether or not we should retain daylight saving. The fact that practically all of the indoor workers and factory population are for it should influence Congress in its behalf.

DEPLORES POLITICAL MOVE.

"It is deplorable that an issue of such a popular nature should be made political capital of by unscrupulous politicians, who inserted the repeal measure as a 'rider' to the agricultural appropriation bill in order to catch the farmer vote. There are sincere farming interests who are honestly in favor of the repeal. That is to be expected in view of the difficulty experienced by most rural people in changing their habits of long standing.

"But why should those who are out of doors most of the time deprive the majority who are benefited by that extra hour of daylight from enjoying the opportunity it gives them to do garden work and be with their families? That is the issue above every other consideration.

"I read that in 1839, when standard time was adopted throughout the nation, the farming population in certain sections refused to recognize standard time and continued on their former schedules. Habit is strong even in death, it is said, and people naturally oppose anything which changes their habits, partly because the vast majority are directly benefited by the daylight saving habit to which they have become accustomed. It would be most unfair to ask them to again change their habits in order to meet the approval of a small minority of the population who are by nature conservative and old-fashioned.

AFFECTS WORKERS' HEALTH.

"Everybody who has made a study of shop and store conditions is for the retention of daylight saving. The added hour of sunlight is a welcome antidote for the physical condition which results from working for long hours in artificial light. The health of all indoor workers is more important than the mere sentimental objections of a small group of agriculturists.

"When the daylight-saving bill was first introduced in 1918 the vast majority of the population were for it. Only a few farming groups were opposed to it. It is my opinion that the operation of the measure has strengthened, instead of weakened, the support of the daylight saving.

"I believe that if a referendum on the question were taken throughout the country, an overwhelming majority would be rolled up in favor of retaining the saving law. The repeal of the law at the present time would be little short of a national calamity.

"After a careful inquiry covering weeks, the Boston Chamber of Commerce is unable to discover any marked opposition to the law as it stands, and we believe that a matter of such tremendous importance to the health and welfare of the people ought not to be made a political question.

"I for one, want to commend the Boston American for its sterling championship of a measure of such vital importance to the people of New England."

SEND THIS TO YOUR MEMBER OF CONGRESS

PETITION TO THE NEW ENGLAND SENATORS AND CONGRESSMEN TO RETAIN THE DAYLIGHT SAVING LAW.

Sign this petition. Have your friends sign it.

To the New England Senators and Congressmen in the Congress of the United States:

Whereas, A rider calling for the repeal of the present Daylight Saving law has been attached to the Agricultural bill now in Congress;

Whereas, Daylight Saving having been tried last Summer was found an successful and beneficial that it was welcomed again this Summer;

Whereas, Daylight Saving is heartily approved by manufacturers, merchants, professional persons, clerks, artisans, school and college authorities and the great body of the public, with the exception of certain agriculturists;

Whereas, The increased use of daylight hours is a preventive of accidents in mechanical lines, a tremendous saving of artificial illumination, a benefit to the eyes and an extension of the hours of outdoor recreation;

The undersigned respectfully urge you to exercise your utmost influence and your vote to prevent the passage of this rider to the Agricultural bill.

We urge this to insure the continuation of an economic benefit to the great majority of men, women and children of this country.

TRAGIC SCENES AS WAR BRIDES ARRIVE

Doughboys' Parents Often Disillusioned at Sight of French "Pippins"

New York, June 2.—There's a whole world of tragedy and comedy, too, when one of the big transports, carrying a few score of war brides of American soldiers abroad, docks here.

In very many cases the husbands of the newlyweds are still in England or France. Red Cross workers go down to the docks to meet the newcomers and chaperone them, but in most instances relatives of the brides are there waiting to give them welcome.

A little French girl, plainly of peasant stock, trim and neat, with rosy cheeks and big, blue eyes, came down the gangplank of one of the ash "war bride" transports and cast timid eyes over the crowd. Her husband's mother and aunt were going to meet her, she had been told.

BRIDE IN TEARS.

Suddenly two greasy-faced women with unkempt hair and dirty clothes pushed through the throng and tried to take her in their arms. They were the new mother-in-law and aunt-in-law. She shrank away from them and clung to a Red Cross worker for a few minutes. She was crying when she went away with them to begin a new life in an East Side tenement with none of the fresh air of the Lorraine valleys.

There was another little drama the same morning. A tall, elderly gentleman, with snow-white hair and fine features, waited as the gangplank was thrown aboard for some sight of his son's bride. He was from Denver, one of the Red Cross workers said. His only son cabled him that he had married "a pippin" in Paris and asked him to come East to meet her at the boat.

FATHER STUNNED.

Down the gangplank came a painted-face creature of some forty Summers, wearing an extremely short skirt and all the colors of the rainbow. She threw herself at the man from Denver, exclaiming in broken English: "Is zis so fazzer of Tom?" For just an instant the old man's head dropped, as if he had been struck by a blow. Then he recovered, forced a smile and extended his hand in greeting. The pair departed in a taxi.

Pays $7,500 Rent for Newport Villa for Season

Newport, R. I., June 2.—The highest price paid for the rental of one of the smaller cottages in any Newport season went on record when Mr. and Mrs. J. Laurens Van Alen leased their cottage on Bellevue avenue, known as "Rosetta Villa," to Arthur Bradley Campbell of Washington for $7,500.

The season for the big rent is because there is not a house left for rent in Newport. Mr. Campbell has already arrived and his brother, Mrs. James McDonald, will spend the season here with him.

SEEK MISSING AVIATOR ON MOUNTAIN

Fear British Flier May Have Crashed Into Forest

Pittsfield, June 2.—Fearing that the missing British flier, Captain Mansell R. James, may have come to grief with his airplane among the forests of Beartown Mountain, in the Berkshires, searching parties are scouring the timberland in that section for some trace of him.

James left Tyringham Wednesday evening in his Sopwith plane en route from Boston to Atlantic City and has not since been heard from.

Representatives of the British royal air force have telegraphed from New York requesting that everything possible be done to locate the missing plane.

Lieutenant George E. Turnure, Jr., formerly a pilot with the Lafayette Escadrille and more recently a member of the American Air Service, is leading the search on foot, but will endeavor to get a plane from New York and continue the quest of Captain James.

Chief of Police Frant T. Coughlin of Lee has started a searching party. The latter is an experienced woodsman and declares James might land in the mountainous regions southwest of Tyringham and not be heard from, if injured, for days and weeks, and if killed perhaps not for months unless an organized search is successful.

HAIR NEW CLEW IN TRAGEDY AT BARRE

Compare Lock From Victim's Head With Strands in Automobile

Barre, Vt., June 2—A lock of the murdered woman's hair cut from her head will be shown the Grand Jury when it convenes in Montpelier on Thursday next to hear the case of the government against Mrs. Isabelle J. Parker and George A. Long, who are charged with the murder of Mrs. Lucina C. Broadwell on May 3 last.

This lock of hair will be shown for comparison with strands of hair, said to have been found in Long's automobile, which stood outside his home, where the police claim the murder was committed, on the night of the strangling of the young mother.

It was on the morning following May 3 that the naked body of Mrs. Broadwell was found in the Wheelock garden, fronting on the main street of this city. State's Attorney Davis will ask for the indictment of Mrs. Parker and Long on the contention that the woman was murdered in Mrs. Parker's house, in which Long and other lodgers lived, by the pair now in custody.

SOUGHT TO DIVERT SUSPICION.

He will further contend that Mrs. Broadwell's body was carried to the Wheelock garden in Long's automobile, stripped of its clothing and left there so as to divert suspicion to a rooming house and other persons in nor affirm.

Since testimony is to be introduced that Long's automobile was seen on Keith avenue, near the Wheelock garden, early on the morning of May 4, the lock of the dead woman's hair is regarded as highly important evidence. Whether the strands of hair with which the lock is to be compared were found in the Long automobile, the police will neither deny or affirm.

The body of the young mother of three children was exhumed from the family lot at Johnson, Vt., where had been found. The hair taken from it was buried a few days after it the head has been closely guarded ever since.

Mrs. Parker and George Long continue to protest their innocence at the jail in Montpelier. The latter has gone so far as to name a man whom he declares is guilty of the crime. Neither will appear before the Grand Jury, which convenes Thursday, simultaneously, however, their case comes up on its continuance from May 23, when they will be arraigned, but its calling will be a mere formality, pending the outcome of the Grand Jury investigation. Both are in good health, although Mrs. Parker has been complaining and occasionally hysterical, due to her age of sixty-nine.

WITNESSES EXAMINED.

There has been no let-up by the police in the preparation of their case. Witnesses are still being examined by the police through James R. Wood, the Boston detective, and are now being more closely watched than ever since State's Attorney Davis has charged that they are being tampered with by certain persons interested in the case, who have actually offered them money to get out of the State. An unusually large number of witnesses will appear before the Grand Jury.

CAR SERVICE AT WINNIPEG RESUMED

City Has 15,000 Troops Ready to Check Interference by Strikers

By International News Service.

Winnipeg, Man., June 2—Street cars were operated here today for the first time since the general strike was called on May 15. Municipal authorities announced that 15,000 armed troops were being held in readiness in the event of any effort to interfere with the service. Municipal authorities say the next twenty-four hours will decide the fate of the strike.

Senator Robertson, Dominion Commissioner of Labor, who has been investigating conditions here for the past two weeks, returned to Ottawa last night. Before leaving he declared that the "motive behind the general strike was for the purpose of assuming control and direction" of industrial, municipal, provincial and Federal activities.

"The promoters of the general strike now sit in the ashes of their folly. In responding to the call to strike the majority of the men isolated and repudiated their own obligations to their trade unions, their contracts with their employers, individually and collectively disregarding their agreements and indicating that possession of what they are contending for is of little value.

"Labor leaders who advocate that only might is right, who hold that law, justice and honor should be disregarded at will, merit and should receive the condemnation of all good citizens. The general strike force is directed against the whole community.

"Socialism has long recognized that trade unions are impossible bars to its revolutionary program and seeks through one big union movement to undermine and destroy the labor organizations whose policies are to regard their obligations as sacred and inviolate.

"Employers must not mistake the outcome of a general sympathetic strike as the defeat of organized labor. On the contrary, labor will emerge from the conflict strengthened with wisdom gained from its experience.

"Events have proved conclusively that the motive behind the general strike was for the purpose of assuming control and direction of industrial affairs, also municipal and federal activities and with the avowed intention of extending that control to wider fields."

$50,000 JEWELS STOLEN FROM MRS. HANNA

Barefoot Thief Gets Gems by Daring Method at Mansion in Berkshires

Stockbridge, June 2—The print of the bare foot of a man is the only clew in the daring robbery of more than $50,000 worth of jewelry from the dressing room of Mrs. Dan R. Hanna in her home three miles from this town.

Since last Thursday, the day after the robbery occurred, New York detectives and State Detective Thomas E. Bligh have been working on the case.

WERE "PROFESSIONALS."

Two men, both supposedly professional second-story workers, are presumed to have made the mysterious night raid on Mrs. Hanna's collection of jewelry, which was one of the finest of the many in this community of the wealthy. The collection consisted of diamonds, pearls, and rings and was kept in a solid gold casket in the top drawer of a mahogany dresser that stood on the opposite side of the room through which the "barefoot" thief made his entrance.

While the fourth wife of Dan R. Hanna was sleeping in the room adjoining the "barefoot" thief is believed to have climbed up over the roof that slopes down from the porch on which the dressing-room opens. Here the footprint was discovered. Neither Mrs. Hanna, her husband nor the servants heard an unusual noise on Wednesday night, and it is theorized that the "barefoot" man knew exactly where the jewelry was kept, and did not lose a second's time on the job.

AUTO WAITED OUTSIDE.

His confederate in an automobile is believed to have waited on the Interlake road outside. One-half mile away is Shadow Brook, the estate of Andrew Carnegie.

Not until Thursday noon was the robbery discovered by Dan Hanna, who is the son of the late Senator Mark A. Hanna. His wife is the divorced wife of John B. Worden of Philadelphia. Some of the jewelry is owned jointly by Dan Hanna.

Mrs. Hanna refused to comment on the robbery and would not disclose the exact amount of her loss. The story of the robbery for that matter leaked out for the first time within the past twenty-four hours and the local police had not been notified.

A Thrilling Serial of Hidden Treasure, Love and Adventure

By JACK LONDON

Author of "The Call of the Wild," "The Valley of the Moon," "The Sea Wolf," "The Iron Heel," "White Fang" and Other Famous Novels

The theme of this story was suggested to the author by Charles W. Goddard.

CHAPTER I.

EVENTS happened very rapidly with Francis Morgan that late Spring morning. If ever a man leaped across time into the raw, red drama and tragedy of the primitive and the mediaeval melodrama of sentiment and passion of the New World Latin, Francis Morgan was destined to be that man, and Destiny was very immediate upon him.

"Parker," he said to the valet, who had been his father's before him, "did you ever notice any signs of fat on R. H. M. in his last days?"

"Oh, no, sir," was the answer, uttered with all the due humility of the trained servant, but accompanied by an involuntary measuring glance that scanned the young man's splendid proportions. Your father, sir, never lost his leanness. His figure was always the same, broad shoulders, deep in the chest, big-boned, but lean, always lean, sir, in the middle.

Young Francis Morgan, inheritor of many millions as well as brawn, stretched his legs after the manner of a full-vigored menagerie lion, and glanced at a headline of the morning paper which informed him of a fresh slide in the Culebra Cut at Panama.

"If I didn't know we Morgans didn't run that way," he yawned, "I'd be fat already from this existence. . . . Eh, Parker?"

"It's Mr. Bascom, sir. He wants you."

"Tell Mr. Bascom to go to ——," said Francis.

"Mr. Bascom says it's about the market, sir, and that he'd like to talk with you only a moment," Parker urged, but so delicately and subduedly as to seem to be merely repeating an immaterial and unnecessary message.

"All right," Francis carefully leaned the rod against a table and went to the 'phone.

"Hello," he said into the telephone. . . . Yes, this is I, Morgan. Shoot. What is it?"

He listened for a minute, then interrupted irritably. "Sell—hell. Nothing of the sort. Of course, I'm glad to know. Even if it goes up ten points, which it won't, hold on to everything. It may be a legitimate rise, and it mayn't ever come down. But it's worth far more than it's listed. I know, if the public doesn't. A year from now it'll list at two hundred—that is, if Mexico can cut the revolution stuff.

"Whenever it drops you'll have buying orders from me. Nonsense. Who wants control? It's purely sporadic. . . . oh? I beg your pardon. I mean it's merely temporary. Now I'm going off fishing for a fortnight. If it goes down five points, buy. Buy all that's offered. Say, when a fellow's got a real bona fide property being bulled it's almost as bad as having the bears after one. . . . yes. . . . Sure. . . . Yes. Good-bye."

And while Francis retraced delightedly the long making rods, destiny, in Thomas Regan's down-town private office, was working overtime. Having arranged with his various brokers to buy, and through his divers channels of access, published reports calculated to whip up public interest, Thomas Regan studied a report from his own expert emissary who had spent two months on the spot, spying out what Tampico Petroleum really had in sight and prospect.

A New Arrival

A clerk brought in a card with the information that the visitor was importunate and foreign. Regan listened, glanced at the card and said:

"Tell this Mister Senor Alvarez Torres, of Ciudad de colon that I can't see him."

Five minutes later the clerk was back, this time with a message penciled on the card. Regan grinned as he read it.

"Dear Mr. Regan:

"Honored Sir—I have the honor to inform you that I have a top bulled it, buy a little more. I'm going to. It's finding money. Yes. Yes, surely. It's too good to dare sell on a flyer now, because it mayn't ever go down. Of course I know what I'm talking about. I've just had eight hours' sleep and haven't had a drink. Yes, yes, good-bye."

He pulled the ticker tape into the comfort of his chair and languidly ran over it, noting with mildly growing interest the message it conveyed.

Parker returned with several slender rods, each a glittering gem of artisanship and art. Francis was out of his chair, ticker flung aside and forgotten as with the exultant joy of a boy he examined the toys and, one after another, began trying them, switching them through the air till they made shrill whip-like noises, moving them gently with prudence and precision under the lofty ceiling as he made believe to cast upon the floor into some unseen pool of trout-lurking mystery.

The Annoying Phone

A telephone bussed. Irritation was swift on his face.

"For heaven's sake answer it, Parker," he commanded. "If it is some silly, stock-gambling female, tell her I'm dead or drunk, or down with typhoid, or getting married, or anything calamitous."

"It's Mr. Bascom, sir. He wants you."

"Tell Mr. Bascom to go to ——," said Francis.

"Mr. Bascom says it's about the market, sir, and that he'd like to talk with you only a moment," Parker urged, but so delicately and subduedly as to seem to be merely repeating an immaterial and unnecessary message.

"All right." Francis carefully leaned the rod against a table and went to the 'phone.

A clerk brought in a card with the information that the visitor was importunate and foreign. Regan listened, glanced at the card and said:

"Tell this Mister Senor Alvarez Torres, of Ciudad de colon that I can't see him."

Five minutes later the clerk was back, this time with a message penciled on the card. Regan grinned as he read it.

"Dear Mr. Regan:

"Do as I do," cried the beautiful unknown, drawing Francis toward the jungle.

on the location of the treasure. Sir Henry Morgan hurled in old pirate days.

"ALVAREZ TORRES."

Regan shook his head, and the clerk was nearly out of the room when his employer suddenly recalled him.

"Show him in—at once."

In the interval of being alone, Regan chuckled to himself as he rolled the new idea over in his mind. "Two unlicked cubs!" he muttered through the smoke of his cigar he was lighting. "Thinks he can play the thin part old H. H. M. played. A trimming is what he needs, and old Graybeard Thomas R. will see that he gets it."

Senor Alvarez Torres' English was as correct as his modish Spring suit, and though the brushed yellow of his skin advertised his Latin-American origin, and though his big black eyes were eloquent of the mixed lustres of Spanish and Indian ling compounded, nevertheless he was as thoroughly New Yorkish as Thomas Regan could have wished.

"By great effort and years of research, I have finally won the clue to the buccaneer gold of Sir Henry Morgan," he preambled. "Of course, it's on the Mosquito coast. I'll tell you how that it's not a thousand miles from the Chiriqui Lagoon, and that Bocas del Toro, within reason, may be described as the nearest town. I was born there—educated in Paris, however—and I know the neighborhood like a book. A small schooner—the sailay is cheap, most very cheap—but the returns, the reward—the treasure!"

"Yes," Senor Torres quickly admitted, "I am somewhat embarrassed—how shall I say—for immediate funds."

"You need the money," the stock operator assured him brutally, and he bowed pained acquiescence.

Much more he admitted under the rapid-fire interrogation. It was true, he had but recently left Bocas del Toro, but behoped never again to go back. And yet he would go back if possibly some arrangement.

Regan Writes a Check.

But Regan shut him off with the abrupt way of the master-man dealing with lesser fellow creatures. He wrote a check, in the name of Alvarez Torres, and when that gentleman glanced at it he read the figures of a thousand dollars.

"Now here's the idea," said Regan. "I put no belief whatsoever in your story. But I have a young friend—my heart is bound up in the boy; but he is too much about town, the white lights and the white-lighted ladies, and the rest—you understand?"

Again Alvarez Torres bowed.

"You need the money," Regan continued. "Strive to interest him. That thousand is for your effort. Succeed in interesting him so that he departs after old Morgan's gold, and two thousand more is yours. So thoroughly succeed in interesting him that he remains three months, two thousand more—six months, five thousand. Oh, believe me, I know his father. We were comrades, partners, I might say, almost brothers, I would sacrifice any sum to win his son to manhood's wholesome path. What do you say? The thousand is yours to begin with. Well?"

With trembling fingers Senor Alvarez Torres folded and unfolded the check.

"I . . . I accept," he stammered and faltered in his eagerness. "I . . . How shall I say? I am yours to command."

Five minutes later, as he arose to go, fully instructed in the part he was to play and with his story of Morgan's treasure revised to convincingness by the brass-tack business acumen of the stock gambler, he blurted out, almost facetiously, yet ever more pathetically:

"And the funniest thing about it, Mr. Regan, is that it is true.

"I have had access to records inaccessible to the public, which is neither here nor there, for the men of my own family—they are family records—have had smaller access and have wasted their lives before me in the futile search.

"The early buccaneers all played such tricks on the charts they drew. My Spanish race so led the Hawaiian Islands by five degrees of longitude."

Another Caller

All of which was in turn Greek to Thomas Regan, who smiled his acceptance of listening and with the same smile conveyed his busy businessman's tolerant unbelief.

Scarcely was Senor Torres gone when Francis Morgan was shown in.

"Just caught 14 fish around here a bit of course," he said, greetings over. "And to whom but you should I apply, so closely played the game with my father? You and he were partners, I understood, on some of the biggest deals. He always told me to trust your judgment. And, well, here I am, and I want to go fishing. What's up with Tampico Petroleum?"

"What is up?" Regan countered, with fine simulation of ignorance of the very thing of moment he was responsible for precipitating. "Tampico Petroleum"

Francis nodded, dropped into a chair and lighted a cigarette, while Regan consulted the ticker.

"Are you short?" the older man queried.

"You mean——"

"Sure. Just that. If she drops, I'll buy. It's finding money."

A Leading Question

"Just about how far would you buy?" was the next searching interrogation, masked by an expression of mingled good humor and approbation.

"All I've got," came Francis Morgan's prompt answer. "I tell you, Regan, it's immense."

"Listen! I tell you, Regan, it's the simon-pure straight legitimate, and it's a shame to have it listed at all. I don't have to wreck anybody or anything to pull it across. The world will be better for my shooting into it. I am afraid to say how many hundreds of millions of barrels of real oil—say, I've got one well alone, in the Huasteca field, that's gushed 27,000 barrels a day for seven months. And it's still doing it. I don't want it to skyrocket."

"Don't you worry about that, my lad. You've got to get your oil piped and the Mexican revolution straightened out before even Tampico Petroleum soars. You go fishing and forget it." Regan paused with finely simulated sudden recollection, and picked up Alvarez Torres' card with the penciled note. "Look who's just been to see me!"

Apparently struck with an idea, Regan retained the card a moment. "Why go fishing for mere trout?"

Francis Falls In

"Sir Henry," Francis smiled, reaching for the card. "So am I a mite proud of the old scoundrel."

He looked up questioningly from the reading of the card.

"It's a plausible case," Regan explained. "Claims to have been born right down there on the Mosquito Coast and to have got the rip from private papers in his family. Not that I believe a word of it. I haven't time or interest to get started believing it stuff outside of my own field."

"Do you know where I can find him?" Francis was asking the next moment, all unwittingly putting his neck into the net of intricates that Destiny, in the visible incarnation of Thomas Regan, was casting out to snare him.

* * * * *

The next morning the meeting took place in Regan's office. Senor Alvarez Torres startled, and controlled himself at first sight of Francis' face. This was not missed by Regan, who grimingly demanded:

"Looks like the old pirate himself, eh?"

Not to Be Denied

Francis was a youth that was not to be denied. Modern maps and ancient charts were poured over, as well as the old documents, handwritten in faded ink on time-yellowed paper, and at the end of half an hour he announced that the next fish he caught would be on either the Bull or the Calf—the two islets off the Lagoon of Chiriqui, on one or the other of which Torres averred the treasure lay.

"I'll catch tonight's train for New Orleans," Francis announced.

But at a privy glance from Regan Alvarez Torres fled with swift efficiency.

"I must join you later, I regret, Mr. Morgan. Some little business that presses—how shall I say?—an insignificant little lawsuit that must be settled first."

"He can join afterward, and straighten you out if you've missed the scent," Regan assured Francis. "And, before it slips your mind, it might be just as well to arrange with Senor Torres some division of the loot—if you ever find it."

"What would you say?" Francis asked.

"Fine!" Francis shook their hands in both of his. "It will save me bother. And I've got to rush to pack and break engagements and catch that train. So long, Regan. Goodby, Senor Torres, until we meet somewhere around Bocas de Torre, or in a little hole in the ground on the Bull or the Calf—you say you think it's the Calf? Well, until then, adios!"

And Senor Alvarez Torres remained with Regan some time longer, receiving explicit instructions for the part he was to play, beginning with retardation and delay,—of Francis and culminating in similar retardation and delay always to be continued.

"In short," Regan concluded, "I don't almost care if he never comes back—if you keep him down there for the good of his health that long and longer."

CHAPTER II.

MONEY, like youth, will not be denied, and Francis Morgan, who was the man-legal and nature-certain representative of both youth and money, found himself one afternoon, three weeks after he had said good-bye to Regan, becalmed close under the land on board his schooner, the Angelique. The water was glassy, the smooth roll scarcely perceptible, and, in sheer ennui and overplus of energy that likewise declined to be denied, he asked the captain, a breed half Jamaica negro and half Indian, to order a small skiff over the side.

"Looks as if I might shoot a parrot or a monkey or something," he explained, searching the jungle-clad shore, half a mile away, through a twelve power glass.

"Most problematic, sir, that you are bitten by a labarri, which is a deadly viper in these parts," grinned the breed skipper and owner of the Angelique, who, from his Jamaica father had inherited the gift of tongues.

But Francis was not to be deterred, for at the moment, through his glass, he had picked out, first, in the middle ground, a white hacienda, and second, on the beach, a white-clad woman's form, and further, had seen that she was scrutinizing him and the schooner through a pair of binoculars.

"Put that stuff over, skipper," he ordered. "Who lives around here—white folks?"

"The Enrico Solano family, sir," was the answer. "My word, they are important gentlefolk, old Spanish, and they own the entire general landscape from the sea to the Cordilleras and half of the Chiriqui Lagoon as well. They are very poor, most powerful rich—in landscape—and they are prideful and fiery as cayenne pepper."

As Francis, in the tiny skiff, rowed shoreward, the skipper's alert eye noted that he had neglected to take along either rifle or shotgun for the contemplated parrot or monkey. And, next, the skipper's eyes picked up the white-clad woman's figure against the dark edge of the jungle.

Straight to the Beach

Straight to the white beach of coral sand Francois rowed, not trusting himself to look over his shoulder to see if the woman remained or had vanished. In his mind was merely a young man's healthy idea of encountering a bucolic young lady, or a half-wild white woman, for that matter, or at the best a very provincial one, with whom he could feel and run away a few minutes of the calm that fettered the Angelique to immobility.

When the skiff grounded he stepped out and with one sturdy arm lifted its nose high enough to the sand to fasten it by its own weight. Then he turned around. The beach to the jungle was bare. He strode forward confidently. Any traveler, on so strange a shore, had a right to seek inhabitants for information on his way—was the idea he was acting out.

And he, who had anticipated a few moments of diversion merely, was diverted beyond his fondest expectations. Like a jack-in-the-box, the woman who, in the flash of vision vouchsafed him, demonstrated that she was the girl-woman, ripely mature and yet mostly girl, sprang out of the green wall of the jungle and with both hands seized his arm. The hearty weight of grip in the seizure surprised him.

He fumbled his hat off with his free hand and bowed to the strange woman with the imperturbleness of a Morgan, New York trained and disciplined to be surprised at nothing, and received another surprise, or several surprises compounded.

Not alone was it her semi-brunette beauty that impacted upon him with the weight of a blow, but it was her gaze, driven into him, that was all of sternness. Almost it seemed to him that he must know her. Strangers, in his experience, never so looked at one another.

The double grip on his arm became a draw, as she muttered, tensely:

"Quick! Follow me!"

A moment he resisted. She shook him in the fervor of her desire and strove to pull him toward her and after her. With the feeling that it was some unusual game, such as one might meet up with on the coast of Central America, he yielded, smilingly, scarcely knowing whether he followed voluntarily or was being dragged into the jungle by her impetuosity.

A Swift Command

"Do as I do," she shot back at him over her shoulder, by this time leading him with one hand of hers in his.

He smiled and obeyed, crouching when she crouched, doubling over when she doubled, while memories of John Smith and Pocahontas glimmered up in his fancy.

Abruptly she checked him and sat down, her hand directing him to sit beside her. Her eyes released him, and pressed it to her heart while she panted:

"Thank God! Oh, merciful Virgin!"

In imitation, such having been her will of him, and such seeming to be the cue of the game, he smilingly pressed his own hand to his heart.

"Won't you ever be serious?" she flashed at him, noting his action.

And Francis was immediately and profoundly, as well as naturally, serious.

"My dear lady——" he began.

But an abrupt gesture checked him; and with growing wonder he watched her bend and listen, and heard the movement of bodies pushing some runway several yards away.

Within a soft, warm palm pressed commandingly to his mouth, she left him with the abruptness that he had already come to consider as customary with her, and slipped away down the runway. Almost he whistled his astonishment. He might have whistled it, had he not heard her voice, not distant, in Spanish, sharply interrogate men whose Spanish voices, half-humbly, half-insolently and half-rebellious-ly answered her.

He heard them move on, still talking; and after five minutes of dead silence heard her call him peremptorily to come out.

"I wonder what Regan would do under such circumstances?" He smiled to himself as he obeyed.

Into the Jungle

Hand in hand, through the jungle to the beach. When she paused, he came beside her and faced forth, still under the impress of the fancies that possessed him that it was game.

The answering of her blazing dark eyes scorched him.

"You fool!" she cried, lifting her finger with what he considered undue intimacy, to the touch of his mustache. "As if that could disguise you——"

"But, my dear lady . . . ." he began to protest his certain unacquaintance with her.

"Oh, you fool," she broke off his speech, was as unreal as everything else which had gone before. All quick was it that he fathomed and saw whence the tiny silver revolver had been drawn, the muzzle of which was now presented more toward his abdomen but pressed closely against it.

"My dear lady . . . ." he tried again.

"I won't talk with you," she shot him off. "Go back to your schooner, and go away . . . ." He guessed she inaudible sob of the pause, as she concluded, "Forever."

BARS MILITARY MAN AS MEXICO PRESIDENT

New Leader of Revolution Wants Only Candidates from Civic Life

Washington, June 2.—Felipe Angeles, who is leading the revolution in Northern Mexico proposes in case he overthrows the carranza government to establish a republic whose President would be drawn from civil and not military life.

Angeles' program call for recognition here, but this have not and will not form the subject of a communication to the state Department. The new leader is said to be well versed in diplomatic procedure to know the futility of attempting to state his cause to the government through an official message until after he has established a de facto government in Mexico. Following is his program as it has been received here:

1. The elimination of any regular army in Mexico. This means the disbanding of the Federal army and the demoralization of its forces. Angeles contends the history of Mexico has been replete with incidents whereby the army has been made the vehicle of ambition by political soldiers. He believes its complete elimination will end this sore in Mexico's history.

2. No military man — meaning a man holding a commission in the army or the holder of any military office—will be permitted to be a candidate for President.

3. The establishment of cordial relations with the United States on the basis of "mutual self-respect", the protection of foreign interests which help in the development of Mexico and the maintenance of law and order.

Angeles is quoted here as saying: "We have a neighbor in the north who, under existing conditions, is a menace to us. This menace should not be met by manufacturing anti-American propaganda and pretending the existence of vital differences, but by dealing with the United States on the basis of mutual self-respect and the establishment of good government at home. The rights of all peoples in Mexico should be safeguarded."

Refugees Flee Chihuahua by Auto; Villa Lying in Wait for Federal Troops

El Paso, Tex, June 2.—No definite report of the action taken by Mexican factions meeting at Nuevo Leon have reached El Paso yet. It will probably be some days before accurate information will be available on this side of the border because of wire and rail interruption.

It was reported refugees are leaving Chihuahua by automobile and wagon. They are moving over the trail used by the Pershing expedition and will reach the border at Columbus, N. M.

DOUBT CASTRO AID.

The report that General Caesar Castro was coming north from Mexico with five thousands of troops to reinforce Northern garrisons has not been confirmed, and it was doubted if such a force could reach Chihuahua cities has been received here and such action was not expected at present because of the strength of the Federal garrisons.

It was regarded that Villa would be satisfied to follow guerilla tactics for a few weeks, preventing reinforcements from coming up and destroying small detachments of Carranzistas until the fall of important cities would be more easily brought about.

SAYS BAY STATE TROOPS OPPOSE PROHIBITION

Washington, June 2—That not a returning soldier in 11 000 was for prohibition and that the great body of veterans favor repeal of war-time prohibition is the opinion of Representative James Gallivan of Massachusetts, author of the bone dry legal wet [illegible] now offering him a beer [illegible] with President Wilson [illegible] on that subject.

SENATORS AND SOX BATTLE

Boston Team Must Soon Show Signs of Life to Keep in Running

Washington, June 2. Never before of late years will the American League race so far advanced, have the Boston Red Sox been in Washington's reading with a low percentage as .444 in the cellar championship table.

What's worse, from a Boston viewpoint, is the fact that the Red Sox are encountered in each game which what's even worse, the hard-hitting traveling Wilke-Barre team, which one-half behind the Bostonians, and if Boston miracle will prevent the Red Sox's head from off.

When the Red Sox came to Washington in April they looked like a championship team in the making. After having won the two games with ease, they suffered in succession and appeared to be a real classy aggregation.

LOSES AT PATERSON.

However, something went wrong. It seems as though everything happened to the Red Sox. Instead of being able to win games when they are to be won, they have lost them.

The Red Sox team that went to Paterson to play the Giants was a team bought a world's championship. That team came to Washington, but left Paterson a defeated team. What happened from Paterson to Washington was an exhibition contest with the Red Sox.

It ended in a defeat. Washington got two runs in the ninth inning, both being scored on Ruth's single. Harry Bandgartner had the Red Sox batters completely at his mercy in the first game. Babe Ruth smirked out a single home run with two of the bases occupied.

TALCOTT COMES THROUGH.

It was Fred Talcott, the Red Sox varsity pitcher who was called to Washington for the purpose of pitching against Walter Johnson. Talcott responded to the call and Johnson was defeated by the score of 3 to 2. Talcott allowed only six hits and struck out seven batters. He has pitched good ball in every game he has been in and now may be put in the regular rotation.

Harry Hooper, the Red Sox outfielder, who was injured in the game with the Yankees at the Polo Grounds, is getting into the old shape and will probably be able to play in the game with the Senators tomorrow. He will be in the game at least one inning today.

HARTFORD PLANS GALA TIME FOR TENNIS COLONY

The Hartford Golf Club has extensive arrangements for the annual New England tennis tournament, which commences next Monday and is the big attraction for the week. The finals will be played on Saturday afternoon. The tournament will be held in connection with the annual meeting of the New England Golf Association. Richard H. Wallace, president of the club, and Walter J. Thurston, secretary, are in charge of the arrangements.

FULLERTON EXPECTS SOX TO GET GOING AT HOME

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

THE week just closed has been an astounding [illegible] National League has contrived to her closely to the rope, but the American League has gone wild, with St. Louis and Detroit showing sudden and unexpected strength, while the Red Sox, Senators and Yankees have been slipping terribly.

It is evident that the fault is not with the teams themselves, but with the management and the handling of men. Huggins has never been at major league caliber as a manager, and Barrow has encountered difficulties, perhaps not due to himself, but to the fact that a lot of his players think Jack Barry ought to have the job.

The fact is that the situation ought to correct itself immediately and that the Yankees and Red Sox ought to win when they get back onto their home fields. They were compelled to take the road out of condition When they get back home and start hitting and winning games the friction will disappear.

There is no oil like victory. If the Red Sox get settled at home and win a few games the friction will disappear

Pat O'Connor Gumming It Up for Yanks' Pilot

THE case of the Yankees, however, is different. The team has not been well handled and the coaching has been terrible. At less three players have gone up the board because of bad coaching at third base. Bad coaching does not figure in the deal.

Virginia has a catcher who violates all the rules of the Episcopal litany. Leave out one of the things that should be done and does all the things that should not be done.

While in a knocking trend of mind we would respectfully call attention to the fact that the third base coaching of our old chum Wilbur Robinson of the Giants has approached the same objective.

This may seem foolish, but I always have been a crank on the subject of third base coaching. A coacher at the third base can win or lose more than games than any individual player on any team can win or lose.

Art Hoyt, Columbia, Pat O'Connor to coach at third base and nine games for Yanks and Marion accept Mathewson to the same job and two or three games for Giants and you have the great variety of the path because he did, or did not, do what he should or should not have done.

The [illegible] point, however, was in a deciding game where Tinker, stopped and tackled by a third base coacher, had hit that coacher on the jaw, knocked him down [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] the deciding one of the season, Tinker [illegible] never studied the proposition or give [illegible] the purpose of the [illegible] coachers.

Runyon Investigates and Finds Dempsey's Real Age 23 Years

By DAMON RUNYON.

In my story, "A Tale of Two Hicks," which is the story of Jack Dempsey, I have said that I rather suspected my hero of giving himself a little the best of it in the matter of his age, which he told me is twenty-three.

Dempsey's life has been so crammed with experience that I could scarcely believe he is as young, and to satisfy my own curiosity I have gone the trouble of communicating with friends of mine in Dempsey's home country, out on Colorado, which happens to be my own old home state. These friends would have no reason to lie about the matter.

My information is that Dempsey was born about June 24, 1895. The county clerk of Lovelock county, Nev., in which Dempsey was born, kept no birth records at that time, and my informants say they are unable to fix the exact date of Jack's birth, but that it was a few days after the 20th of June.

He is, therefore, twenty-three years old this month.

Stocks Are Strong and Active in the New York and Boston Markets During the Morning

MOTOR ISSUES MAKE BIG GAINS

Southern Pacific Leads Rails, and Crucible Is a Steel Feature

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were strong in New York at noon after a very active morning. First hour transactions were not far below half a million shares as a total. Many issues made large gains. At their highest General Motors was up more than 6 and Studebaker more than 12 points. Motors were the strongest class. This took the lead for gains when trading began, but did not maintain the pace.

Southern Pacific was the strongest rail, and at one time showed two points gain. Among the strongest issues was Nova Scotia Steel, which gained advanced nine points at its highest. Crucible was up more than four and American Woolen more than three. Other issues to make large advances were Central Leather, Mexican Petroleum, Texas Company, Pan American, American Ice, Virginia Carolina Chemical and American Cotton Oil.

Stocks to sell at record high prices included General Motors, Pierce Arrow, Studebaker, Nova Scotia Steel, Lackawanna Steel, American Woolen, Baldwin Locomotive, Pan-American, Virginia Carolina Chemical and American Ice. Others to sell at their 1919 highest were Studebaker, Pacific Petroleum, Eastern Pacific, Crucible, Chino and Central Leather.

U. S. Steel ranged from 108 to 109¼, the latter being the highest price at which it had previously sold this year. Marine issues remained weak. Its new common was off 3⅞ at 43¾, after selling as low as 42⅞. The preferred was off ⅝ at 121½, after selling as low as 120½ and as high as 122.

GOOD BUYING AT OPENING.

Buying was good when the market reopened after a three-day closure, orders having accumulated during that period to a considerable aggregate. Initial prices were generally along the line and a number of issues advanced from one to three points. Oils and motors were the two strongest groups, while Southern Pacific was notable for strength among rails. American Sugar sold ex-dividend and more than recovered it during the first few minutes of trading in steels at the start. U. S. Steel was freely offered after beginning with a final quarter point gain, under this pressure. But it quickly recovered and the list followed it upward. Marine common opened lower and the preferred issue reacted after advancing more than two points.

The demand for stocks continued to be widespread and had its origin with the public. Nothing unfavorable developed while the market was closed for Memorial Day and the week-end holiday, and the week began with speculation unabated in order and scope.

WILL REMAIN HIGH.

More demand for most commodities is regarded as inevitable and there is almost universality believed that prices for materials and goods of all kinds will remain high for an indefinite period. With uncertainty on that point removed, readjustment will take a long stride forward. Business interests are flocking now to obtain higher production and distribution costs and planning for future operations on that basis.

STEEL AND COPPER QUIET

There is a little more demand for steel products at the beginning of the month than for U. S. Steel Corporation is expected to make a better showing in its next report as to unfilled tonnage. There is not much cheer in that being the best that can be said for the present. There have been recently slight reduction of the price for iron, but the effect has been to make more selling interests in order to stimulate demand. Larger interests are waiting for business to develop further.

Cotton Crops Below Normal

Washington, June 2.—The crop reporting board of the Bureau of Crop Estimates, U. S. Department of Agriculture, estimates from the reports of the correspondents and agents of the bureau, that the condition of the cotton crop on May 25 was 64.6 per cent. of a normal, as compared with 82.3 on May 25, 1918, 69.5 on May 25, 1917, 75.5 on May 25, 1916, and 78.3 the average of the last ten years on May 25. An estimate of the acreage planted this year will be included in the July cotton report.

Capital Increases Authorized

Stockholders of the Nashua Manufacturing Company have authorized an increase in the capital stock from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 common, and $1,000,000 preferred, making a total of $6,000,000 all of which will be offered to stockholders.

The W. H. McElwain Co. stockholders have authorized an increase in the common and preferred stock. It is understood $500,000 will be issued. This will make the amount outstanding $5,000,000.

Inspiration Tonopah-Divide Nipissing

Interest has been acutely manifested by conservative investors who appreciate that the cycle for early buying of mining shares is upon us.

We regard the above named issues as among the leaders to be early considered and have prepared a special letter treating of their latest developments.

MINES ACTIVE IN LOCAL TRADING

Several Issues Sell Here at Highest Prices for 1919

After a steady start the Boston market became more active and prices worked upward, taking the list as a whole. A number of issues showed substantial gains. Edison and Walworth were strong, as were United Fruit, American Woolen preferred and American Booth Magnetic. They advanced from one to more than two points. Woolen preferred sold at its highest for the year. Bigheart was active, but had a narrow range, which was true of packing issues as a group.

Low priced copper mining issues were the market feature, with Mayflower-Old Colony largely traded in. It showed more than a point gain at its highest. St. Mary's Mineral Land was up nine points during the morning. Union Land advanced a fraction and North Butte a point. The latter sold at its high for the year, as did East Butte and Mayflower-Old Colony.

Before 10 o'clock American Telephone was off a point.

MORE DEMAND FOR STANDARD RAIL STOCKS

Increased demand for the shares of standard railroads which in the past have been standards with investors is the opinion in the Capitol that Congress will be liberal in providing for their needs while under Federal control. The prospect of largely increased earnings after their owners resume management. Among rail stocks which made new 1919 and highest prices in several years were Atchison and southern Pacific.

Gains were made more than a point which most carriers were doing otherwise. Reading was the most active, increasing income of $14,206,338 against guaranteed compensation of $12,-, leaving a surplus of $1,206,338.

Pennsylvania for 1918 showed $22,129,747 applicable to common dividends or 9.98 per cent. upon $221,785,000 common stock outstanding.

Southern Pacific is expected to show earnings of about 12 per cent for its stock in 1918.

New York, June 2.—The cotton market opened active and strong today, first prices being 28 to 60 points above Thursday's close. At the end of the first twenty minutes prices were about 30 points net higher. Opening prices were: July, 31.90; October, 31.00; December, 30.70; January, 30.00; March, 30.50.

Chicago Grain Market

Chicago, June 2.—Opening prices on the Board of Trade were: Corn, July, 160½ to 161; September, 153; Oats, July 67¼ to 67⅝; September, 65⅝. Pork, July, 56.25. Lard, July, 32.85; September, 32.00.

RISE IN COTTON NOT DUE TO EXPORTS

Price Advance Caused by Great Consumption by American Mills

Cotton has sold recently at the highest prices known since the war between the states but this has not been due to abnormal exportation which, in fact, has been below expectations for the season, to date only 1,000,000 bales, although about twice greater than at the corresponding time a year ago.

But a larger foreign demand is looked for when textile conditions improve in Europe and Allied countries and when Germany and Austria have a chance to obtain cotton supplies. They are destitute of them now. Opinions on a large amount of the cotton now on hand in this country are held by foreigners, who have been waiting for more shipping facilities.

High prices are partly due to the great Summer and Autumn mills and the lateness of the new crop, which is from 10 to 15 days later than below normal maturity at this season.

In discussing the situation, the National Bank of Commerce declares that world production of cotton is below the normal consumption average, and in regard to consumption points out that Japan has increased Germany as the third largest cotton consuming country in the world.

There has been considerable discussion regarding what competition Germany can offer after accepting peace terms, if all or most of the cotton she can buy. The bank says Germany has the machinery to resume her place, remarking:

"Germany had 11,186,000 active spindles in 1913. On the number of spindles as well as the consumption of cotton, she was the third leading nation. So far as mere spindles go, she is prepared to resume her place as an important cotton manufacturing country. Prussia had 9,213,000 active spindles in 1913, France 7,400,-, and Austria-Hungary 4,000,000. Consumption of cotton for normal civilian uses has been greatly curtailed in two directions as a result of the war. The Central Powers did not consume it because they could not get it, while the Entente nations diverted from civilian to military purposes. The cotton manufacturing industry expanded in Japan, due to a lesser degree, in some other countries, but those countries which before the war depended upon Great Britain and Germany for their supplies of cotton goods cannot be otherwise than short."

ANACONDA MINES SILVER IN LARGE QUANTITIES

Aside from its copper operations, Anaconda is one of the largest silver mine producers in the world. With silver at its present and prospective price, the white metal figures will form a still more important item in its earnings. The latest quotations for silver is 1.03½ cents an ounce. In 1918 Anaconda mined 10,076,747 ounces.

Anaconda's silver production in ounces for the last eight years has been as follows:

1918	10,076,747	1914	8,314,316
1917	9,308,156	1913	10,240,337
1916	10,790,704	1912	11,014,737

INFLATION HAS NOT HELD UP BUSINESS

Trade Improving Despite Conditions Resulting from World Upheaval

Business improved last week, according to reports from various sources, and while there are conditions to be moderated it is steady and progressive. This indicates that the expansion of trade is healthy and that a foundation is being laid for permanent prosperity. Values are greatly inflated no doubt, but that was inevitable, such as now exists always follows a world upheaval and it will be a long time probably before the old level of purchasing power and demand actually gets back to a good standard.

There is optimism in the monthly report of the Federal Reserve Bank, which says: "Despite abnormally high prices, retail trade throughout the country is assuming unprecedented volume. Practically uniform reports from all Federal Reserve districts point to a continuation of autumn of unusual activity, with many indications of business prosperity, given crop conditions and merchandise and to some degree in manufacturing."

NO CROP SCARE AS YET.

Crop conditions continues favorable and it is a remarkable fact that so far this year there has been no "crop scare." The textile industries are more active than ever and the late Spring improvement in such manufacturing lines was extraordinary. As recently as the last half of the wool machinery in the country was idle. Now woolen mills are trying to meet peace demands and almost as insistent as war requirements. Cotton mills are struggling to fill orders which are accumulating beyond their capacity.

There is more foreign demand for copper, but domestic buying is still most unsatisfactory as to volume, and with a large surplus to be worked off it will be some time before there will be resumption of mining upon a normal scale. But the steel situation is more encouraging in that there is no surplus and the public producers to maintain a firm stand as to prices. The domestic price cutting which many consumers has not materialized and, in fact, the trend is toward higher, although slight reductions on finished steel lines been occasionally reported.

Structural steel orders are good, however. But a great change is needed to fill orders which are accumulating beyond their capacity. The placing of rail orders by the Railroad Administration was a decided help in the steel trade.

RAILROAD SITUATION IS BAD.

The railroad situation continues lamentable, but there is more hope that carriers will soon be put on a paying basis than was entertained a few months ago. Congress must provide for their immediate needs and while sentiment on the part of Railroad Administration is that the Government permitting them to increase rates it is believed in that circle that more traffic would result in paid than profits on the basis of present charges.

But railroad managers are not so sanguine on this point and believe that in the end the government will be forced to authorize rates which will yield from $300,000,000 to $400,-000,000 additional annual revenue in order to offset $1,500,000,000 additional yearly costs.

In reviewing the situation in May the First National Bank said in its "New England Letter" that several factors have contributed to the growing confidence in an era of good business. "Stocks of raw materials and goods are scant

TWO AUTOS STOLEN FOR JOY RIDES RECOVERED

Stolen late Saturday night from the parking space at Nutting's-on-the-Charles, Waltham, two automobiles stolen by joy riders were located by the police of Lincoln and Waltham.

A roadster owned by B. A. Russell of East Lexington was discovered at Lincoln in a battered condition. It had climbed a stone wall.

The machine, owned by Gene C. Seafforton, No. 15 Avon street, Lynn, was found in Waltham. This machine had been left because the gasoline had been consumed.

New England's Great Future on the Sea

The good news comes to us of the opening of a direct steamship route between Boston and the great eastern ports of South America. We are informed that five sturdy steamships will ply between Boston and those ports, making fortnightly sailings.

We hope that this is a good portend of Boston's and New England's great future. We hope that this and other things that are evidently stirring are signs of the reconquest of the sea by New England enterprise.

We are confident that when our men of great business capacity get out of the illegitimate business of trying to run our public utilities and turn their minds to the development of our foreign trade, we shall see political decency and peace at home and prosperity on the wings of our foreign enterprises.

Dr. Wood Tells Some Astounding Truths About American Children in the June Number of Good Housekeeping

Copyright, 1919, Star Company.

It is a sad fact that most of us spend too much time thinking of great things, writing of great men, telling of big projects.

We decorate ourselves to celebrate what we think we have done when we should put on sackcloth and ashes for the things we have neglected.

Let us humble ourselves today by considering the children of this country and how we are neglecting them.

The trouble is that we do not take the trouble to acquaint ourselves with real conditions.

Fortunately there are some men who are generous enough with their time and their talents to properly study those things from which most of us indolently turn away.

One such man is Dr. Thomas D. Wood, professor of physical education at Columbia University, who has written for the June number of Good Housekeeping a most astounding article on the neglect of American children.

You may think that Dr. Wood is preaching about the slum children, the offspring of the poor. But he is not. He talks of the school children of the country, concerning whom he has collected from official sources some extraordinary facts and figures.

Read them and be amazed:

At least one per cent.—200,000 of the 20,000,000 school children in the United States—are mentally defective.

Over one per cent.—250,000 at least—of the children are handicapped by organic heart disease.

At least five per cent.—1,000,000—have now, or have had tuberculosis, a danger often to others as well as to themselves.

Five per cent.—1,000,000 of them—have defective hearing, which unrecognized gives many of the undeserved reputation of being mentally defective.

Twenty-five per cent.—5,000,000—of these school children have defective eyes. A majority of these children have received no attention.

About twenty-five per cent.—5,000,000 children—are suffering from malnutrition, and poverty is not the most important cause of this serious barrier to healthy development.

From fifteen to twenty-five per cent.—3,000,000 to 5,000,000—have adenoids, diseased tonsils or other glandular defects.

Adenoids and diseased tonsils make backward pupils and interfere with the child's general development and health.

From ten to twenty per cent.—2,000,000 to 4,000,000—have weak foot arches, weak spines or other joint defects.

From fifty to seventy-five per cent.—10,000,000 to 15,000,000—have defective teeth, and defective teeth are more or less injurious to health.

Seventy-five per cent.—15,000,000—have physical defects which are potentially or actually detrimental to health.

Would you have believed that such a record was possible?

Would you have believed that a nation which in a few months found it possible to physically and mentally examine millions of men as to their fitness to fight would continuously neglect many more millions of little children suffering from defects most of which could be remedied?

We care for our livestock better than we care for our children. Men are paid to test animals for disease and provide for their curing.

We pay more attention to the dirt under our feet, for any farmer can send a sample of soil from his farm to the Agricultural Department at Washington, and if it is diseased—for soil has its diseases the same as human beings—an expert will prescribe a cure.

We have laws which prescribe light and air in cattle barns, but in New York are schoolrooms where there is practically no daylight and where pupils study even at noontide by artificial light. Thousands of city school children take the only exercise they can get in dirty, ill-ventilated, artifically lighted basements stead of the great outdoors.

Dr. Wood goes into further detail than it is possible to do here. More than that, he devises and advises a plan for the correction of his enormous evil.

The every father and mother should read the entire article. mining ...uld be on the desk of every Board of Education and We reg... issues as are, to be early ... studied by every member of every Legislature in have prepared ... the subject of corrective and constructive treating of their ... developments. States Congress. If interested, send for ...ential man or woman. To hinder develop- today. ...egligence as Dr. Wood depicts is to curse ... a weakened race and a decaying ...

HERE'S SOMETHING YOU'VE NEVER THOUGHT OF BEFORE!... DON'T YOU THINK YOU OUGHT TO THANK THE THOUSANDS OF WOMEN WHO WORKED SO HARD TO HELP US WIN THE WAR? THE CANTEEN WORKERS, COMMUNITY WORKERS, KNITTERS AND WHAT NOT?... I THINK YOU SHOULD. WHAT DO YOU THINK?

More Truth Than Poetry

NOTHING ELSE MATTERS

By S. E. KISER.

YOU pause to say that all is wrong,
That proud men still oppress the weak;
You say the way is rough and long,
Your tone is doubtful when you speak;
The nations cling to jealousies,
And cause for grieving still is found;
But why come seeking to destroy
The gladness that is mine? My boy
Is home again, and safe and sound!

WE hear of armies clashing still,
And there is rivalry, and hate;
The greedy rob, the careless kill,
And rogues invade our halls of state;
The toiler's burdens grow and grow
In spite of all his threats or pleas,
But linger not to tell me so;
Why plague me with your tales of woe?
My boy is home from overseas!

THE market may not go your way,
The lover's fondest hope may die;
The wilful still may go astray,
And cheaters cheat and liars lie;
Our chieftain's plans may go amiss,
The mobs may grumble or rebel;
But I care not what is to be;
My soldier has come home to me,
And he is whole, and all is well!

BY THE WAY, WHO IS HE?

The Vice-President of Germany. If there is one, is attracting about the same amount of attention that the Vice-President of the United States is able to command.

NO, NOR THE LAST TIME, EITHER

A doughnut, baked by Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army, was sold in Wall Street for $13,000. It was not, however, the first time that a big price had been paid in Wall Street for something with a hole in it.

BUT WON'T WE BE FLYING THEN?

Henry Ford certainly is a child of fortune. By the time he gets his new cheap car on the market it is likely to be possible again to buy a set of tires without mortgaging the old home.

WE HAD EXPECTED HIM THERE

"Doc" Cook, who claimed that he was the first man to reach the North Pole, is in Texas trying to discover oil, but even if he succeeds he will have trouble in making some people believe it is greasy.

SHE'S A kind lady.
AND SHE has a grandchild.
A LITTLE girl.
WHO IS two years old.
AND HER name is Jane.
AND THEY'VE just moved out
TO THEIR Summer home.
AND WHEN they came.
JUST A week ago.
SOME LITTLE field mice.
CAME OUT of somewhere.
AND EARLY one morning.
WHILE LITTLE Jane.
AND HER kind grandma.
WERE SITTING quite still.
AND EATING eggs.
OR WHATEVER it was.
THEY BOTH looked down.
AND THERE on the floor.
BUT A few feet away.
WAS A little mouse.
WITH A little brown back.
AND TWO little beads.
WHERE ITS eyes should be.
AND IT sat right up.
ON ITS hind legs.
AND GRANDMA says.
THAT IT scratched its ear.
BUT ANYWAY.
WHATEVER IT did.
IT PLEASED little Jane.
AND SHE wanted it.
AND WENT after it.
AND IT ran away.
AND LITTLE Jane cried.
AND THE kind grandma.
WENT OUT to the cupboard.
AND GOT some cheese.
AND BROUGHT it back.
AND LAID it down.
AND TOOK little Jane.
AND THEY both sat down.
AND WAITED there.
AND NEVER moved.
AND THE mouse came back.
AND IT found the cheese.
AND NIBBLED away.
AND JANE was pleased.
AND AFTER that.
FOR THE next three days.
THIS KIND grandma.
AND LITTLE Jane.
HAD THE little mouse.
AT THEIR morning meal.
AND SATURDAY came.
AND GRANDPA came.
AND HE saw the mouse.
AND WENT right into town.
AND BOUGHT a trap.
AND WHILE he was gone.
THIS KIND grandma.
BLOCKED UP the hole.
WHERE THE mouse came in.
AND JANE is sad.
AND CAN'T understand.
AND GRANDMA'S afraid.
AND DOESN'T dare tell.
AND GRANDPA is sore.
FOR THE trap's still there.
WITH ITS bit of cheese.
AND SOMEWHERE outside.
IS THE little mouse.
AND IT'S probably sore.
BECAUSE IT can't get in.

I THANK you.

THE FAULTS OF OTHERS GIVE HER NO REST

By Winifred Black

I KNOW a woman who goes around the world with a rubber stamp in each hand—no, I mean in her mind.

One of the stamps says "approval," and whenever you speak or sing or yawn or sigh or sneeze or shiver or laugh or cry or smile or nod or shake your head or walk or sit down or stand up or turn around, or do anything on earth in that woman's presence, you can just see her making up her mind which stamp she's going to use on you.

Approved—that you must be, and everything that you say or do or think or wish or hope or dread or pray, either approved or disapproved you are, in that woman's mind.

Do you like pink? If you're dark and pink is becoming to you the Stamp Woman approves of your liking; if you happen to be blonde with a little red in your hair, she disapproves of it, and you might save her only child from death, nurse her through the fever, pay the mortgage on her grandmother's farm and go bail to get her twin brother out of jail, and she would never forget that she did not quite approve of you because you liked pink, and had no right to like it.

If you happen to think as she does about some perfectly insignificant thing, the Stamp Woman approves of you.

And though you murder a sleeping infant, put poison in your own mother's tea, run out at night and steal the clothes off the neighbor's clothes line, she still remembers that she once stamped you "approved," and she will hate forever a little liking for you, no matter what you are or what you do or do not do.

She Weighs Everything

Interest, a pleasant human curiosity, good-humored human tolerance, the broad view which takes a broad interest in humanity in general—these things the Stamp Woman does not know exist—and if she did know she would not "approve" of them.

She weighs everybody and everything on her funny little scales and measures everything and everybody in her own queer little pint cup, and she never even knows she's doing it.

She can't laugh and let the world go by.

She can't smile at the nonsense of some nonsensical friend, and thank goodness that somebody is light-hearted enough to laugh once in a while, even if she herself feels that the world is going to the demnition bow-wows along with our mourned and much missed friend, Mr. Mantilini.

My friend with the stamp mind doesn't approve of the woman across the way. The woman across the way has a son who isn't doing just as he should and she knows it, and tries to control she doesn't, and the Stamp Woman thinks she ought to sympathize about it, and ask us to sympathize with her, and when the woman across the way gave a little tea the other day and had some flowers and tried to make herself feel less she was having a good time, the Stamp Woman wouldn't go.

She stayed at home—and disapproved.

There's a pretty girl in our neighborhood who has more admirers than she can always manage discreetly.

Dear me, how the Stamp Woman does disapprove of her, and yet she's such a pretty, soft-eyed, smiling little thing—oh, yes, I know she hasn't the wisdom of Solomon or the dignity of Juno, but I can't help wanting to grab her and give her a good squeeze every time I see her.

The Stamp Woman does not approve of me for feeling like that; she thinks I show a lack of principle.

SPENDING TO THE GLORY OF ONE'S COUNTRY

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

WE are told in the greatest of all poems, that "to everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the sun—a time to kill and a time to heal; a time to break down and a time to build up."

We have lived through the terrible killing and breaking-down period and can now rejoice in this time for healing and building up. But we cannot merely sit down and rejoice; we have got to get busy. Our first duty is to supply jobs for the returning soldiers; and in the effort to do this, women, as always, can play a big part.

A government department created for the purpose of scientific work for the discharged boys has started out on the policy of persuading people generally to "spruce up."

Now, here's an essentially feminine opportunity, and one which woman thoroughly understands. From the beginning of time she has wasted much of her energy in inducing man to spruce up.

In a womanless world there would be neither tailors nor haberdashers, merely a few blanket-weavers in cold climates.

So woman is now offered the chance of following her soul's inclination and doing a patriotic duty at the same time.

Of course, the house needs painting. It hasn't had a fresh coat since the war began. Also, the cellar needs to be cemented, and there's a lot of carpenter work and repairing to be done. Every room needs resapering, and the woodwork is a sight. Don't waste your ingenuity and use up all the gray matter in your brain trying to make the old place look habitable. It needs to be gone over from top to bottom.

Go and tell the neighbors what you are planning; stir up envy and emulation among them, so that they will go and do likewise. Swamp the contractors with orders.

Wherein Spending Helps

When he hears of your intentions, your husband will probably draw down the corners of his mouth and say: "We won't do anything of the kind until things are in a more settled condition." Failing to see that this is the way to get them in a more settled condition.

But you know how to manage him. Do it now. Nagging or coaxing, whichever method he responds to best.

Remind him that everyone concedes the country is on the verge of such prosperity as has never been known, and that the psychological effects of having everything bright and new and spick and span about him will probably increase his own sense of prosperity and thereby his earning capacity.

It was your patriotic duty to buy government bonds, and you did it. Now it is your patriotic duty to spend your money.

This is the hour of the extravagant. Poor things, they go through life being scolded and repressed and moralized over for their spend-thrift tendencies. Now they can look down on the thrifty and waste a little in order to maintain their country's honor.

Now It's Your Turn

The soldiers are returning to their own beautiful, rich, splendid, generous country at the rate of one hundred thousand a month, and every jobless ex-soldier is a blot in our national escutcheon, a reflection upon our pride and patriotism.

It is only a year ago that these men who today rank among the best fighters in the world were an unknown quantity. If they had failed, this country could never have held up its head again. We should have been bowed in the dust with humiliation.

But they covered themselves with glory; they crowned America with new and fresh laurels. And now at the present time is our big chance to show our eternal gratitude.

It is maudlin to sit and sigh because there are thousands of soldiers out of work. And shedding a few sentimental tears or shaking your head and groaning over conditions isn't going to help.

The thing to do is to get busy. We can't race around and beg this person or that to give jobs to the discharged men, but we can help to create such a demand for labor that every man will find a place.
